Truman Calls Housing Bill Inadequate, But Signs It

President Truman yesterday signed a housing bill designed to make it easier to finance low-cost homes, but rapped the measure as falling far short of what the country needs.

Blasting the Republican-controlled Congress for "deliberate neglect" of people most in need of adequate housing, the President said he signed the "emasculated measure" only because it was better than nothing.

He had asked the special session to pass the Taft-Ellender-Wagner Housing Bill containing provisions for low-rent public housing, slum clearance and aids for farm housing.

The President said this was second in importance only to anti-inflation laws.

Guarantees Loans to States

But Congress ignored the Government-financed projects listed in the T-E-W bill and passed a substitute measure offered by Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.).

This is what the housing bill, now law, will do:

1. It will permit the Federal Housing Administration to guarantee loans made to States, municipalities and nonprofiit corporations building rental housing.

2. Authorize the FHA to insure an additional 800 million dollars worth of mortgage loans on large-scale rental units where the cost for a family unit is not over $9000.

3. Make it simpler for builders of prefabricated houses to get loans.

4. Speed building of housing projects by permitting builders to get 88 per cent insured mortgage loans on projects of at least 25 homes costing $6300 or less each.

5. On houses costing $6300 or less, it will authorize Government insurance on 95 per cent buyers'

Maybank Seen Sure Victor in S. C. Primary

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 10 (U.P.)—Senator Burnet Rhett Maybank, never beaten in a South Carolina election, outdistanced four opponents in the Democratic primary today and appeared the almost certain winner of a new six-year term without a runoff.

Returns from 1230 of the State's 1565 precincts gave Maybank 120,474 votes to 55,929 for former Representative W. J. Bryan Dorn; 31,002 for Neville Bennett, 11,639 for Alan Johnstone and 10,932 for Marcus Stone.

Maybank was leading in 41 of the State's 46 counties and every vote count up to 10:30 p. m. (EST) was increasing his majority in an election where Negroes voted freely.

A tide of Maybank votes from Charleston, where he was former mayor and began his rise to the top of Palmetto State politics, enabled him to establish his majority as the count of precincts approached the one-third mark.

Negroes voted heavily in Charleston as in other larger cities, their unqualified voting rights assured for a primary for the first time since the reconstruction.

Maybank's opponents assailed him for recommending a Federal jurist, District Judge J. Waties Waring, who had decreed the free Negro ballot and equal membership in the Democratic Party.

Maybank, however, also criticized Waring's rulings during the campaign and pointed out that he had been the first to denounce Waring.

Three House seats also were on the ballot. Incumbent John J. Riley was trailing Hugo Sims, jr., only 28, in the Second District in early

Bumper Grain Crops Due To Reduce Pork Prices Soon, Beef by Fall of '49

(Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board of The Washington Post, and A. F. Jones, assistant to the Publisher, in an effort to determine the effect of the record-breaking corn and wheat crops on food prices, interviewed meat and poultry packers, dairy processors, grain industry leaders, farmers and agricultural economists in Minneapolis and Chicago. Mr. Meyer was closely associated with agricultural economy for many years as head of the Farm Loan Board and in other Government positions. Mr. Jones was for years a reporter and editor in the agricultural Midwest.

Their report, coming from sources close to America's food supplies, is a factual picture and of importance to everyone interested in food prices.)

By Eugene Meyer and A. F. Jones

Chicago, August 10.—This country today, from one end to the other, is a lush garden, heavy with the most bountiful crops in its history.

The great plains, and, indeed, every section, are covered with waving fields of tasseled corn and within a few weeks farmers will be harvesting it and starting the process of turning it into meat.

It is the greatest corn crop in American history — estimated at 3,506,000,000 bushels, and this is one billion bushels more than last year.

Added to this great gift by a kind Providence, is the second biggest wheat crop this country has ever raised, estimated today at 1,284,000,000 bushels. Adding the carryover from last year, there is more wheat in sight today than there was last year, when America produced its greatest wheat crop.

Other Crops Sufficient

So it is with other crops—oats, soybeans, barley and hay—the yield is either record-breaking, or of such proportions that every need can be met. Transportation and storage facilities in the Southwest are taxed beyond capacity by the great winter wheat crop. In a few weeks, the same thing will be true of the Northwest in moving the spring wheat crop. And when the unbelievable corn crop is ready, every crib will be piled high and the greatest livestock feeding campaign this country has ever seen will be under way.

The economic, social and political consequences of this great crop will be of far-reaching importance. Farmers, with prewar debts largely paid off, and already rolling in money, will reap a great bounty. The export obligations of the United States can be met and to spare. Europe, too, has a much better crop than last year when drought, cold, and other factors caused hunger and dire hardship.

The question closest to the heart of every American consumer is, naturally, what these great crops will do to food prices. What will it mean to the price of meat, of butter and eggs and bread and poultry?

Low Price Sun Emerging

It was to get the facts on this question that we went to Minneapolis and to Chicago. We talked to farmers, to large dealers and processors, to cooperative handlers of food, to agricultural economists.

The picture on food prices is not all sunshine, but it is an undeniable fact that the sun is peeping through the clouds. It may take a year or more before the full effect of the great crops will be reflected in some meat items, such as beef, but in pork products and some others, price reductions are forecast for the last quarter of this year.

The big cloud in the meat price sky is the fact that there are not enough animals on the farms of America to supply the great demand, although feed grain supplies will be abundant. With full employment and money in every man's pocket, there are more hands reaching for every steak and every

PUC Official Proposes 13c Trolley Fare

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

A proposal for a 13-cent cash fare, three tokens for 35 cents and a $1.75 weekly pass was made by a Public Utilities Commission official at yesterday's Capital Transit Co. fare raise hearing.

V. A. McElfresh, executive accountant and auditor of the PUC, presented an eight-point analysis outlining his recommendations for changes in the CTC fare schedule.

His testimony was followed by several hours of cross-examination.

PUC Auditor's Analysis

McElfresh's proposal represented scaling-down of the CTC request for a 15-cent fare, two tokens for a quarter and a $1.85 weekly pass. Present rates are 10 cents cash, no token sales and a $1.50 weekly pass. Under McElfresh's plan, a token would cost 11.67 cents compared to the 12.5 cents proposed by CTC.

The McElfresh analysis follows:

1. The present fare structure is not providing "anything like a fair return on the investment."

2. "Significant trends indicate that a further decline is in prospect."

3. "A change in fare structure appears necessary to maintain the company in sound financial position."

See Return of 5.76 Per Cent

4. His fare structure would "produce a return of 5.76 per cent," well below a fair return for this company," he testified. Car token and weekly pass passengers "are expected to decline in the aggregate about 11.33 per cent.

"If such a decline materializes, a further curtailment of service may result in additional operating economies and provide a means of increasing the return earned."

5. The proposed fare schedule "maintains approximately the same balance between types of fare that existed prior" to the last rate change. However, "it will have, I believe, the highly undesirable effect of slowing up service by reason of the introduction of pennies in the cash fare rate."

6. "A straight cash fare is more desirable and more equitable than a fare structure of cash, tokens and passes. A 10-cent fare would be most desirable," but it would not "provide sufficient revenue."

7. There is "no positive assurance" that the proposed schedule "will provide sufficient income to maintain the company in a sound financial position." Therefore, a "further upward revision may be necessary in the not-too-distant future," he warned.

8. "A zone system of fares would be more equitable than a District-wide fare. With a higher fare for long-haul rides, I believe it would

Ruler of State Facing Famine Scored for $10,000,000 Spree

Bombay, India, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—The Baroda Legislature has accused the princely state's Maharajah, long considered one of the world's richest men, of misusing nearly 10 million dollars in a six-week spending spree last spring.

A resolution demanded that the 40-year-old turf-loving Maharajah, Pratapsinha Gaekwar, resign. It called on the Dominion of India, with which Baroda is affiliated, to institute a regency council.

Premier Dr. Jivraj Mehta called attention to the Maharajah's alleged transactions in April and May while "famine is staring us in the face in part of the state."

The resolution charged that, while the Maharaja's privy purse amounted to more than one million dollars, he took large loans, often without interest, from the treasury, and asked the treasury to write off some of the loans.

The legislative resolution stated that the demand for the abdication is partly due to the Maharajah's conduct ever since his so-called marriage. In 1943 he broke a state antibigamy law, enacted by his father, by marrying Princess Sita Devi of Pithapuram.

Four months ago, after popular agitation had forced the Maharajah to grant a democratic government he left India saying he was going to Paris for reasons of health. He turned up in England for the Derby.

West Plans New Talks In Moscow

Moscow, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—Diplomats of the United States, Britain and France met again today to plan new steps in their current negotiations with Soviet leaders over East-West differences.

They conferred last night with Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov. Indications were that additional conferences will be held with Russian leaders, perhaps again with Prime Minister Stalin. The Western representatives appeared weary but not impatient.

Frank Roberts, special British envoy, remarked to newsmen: "Well, we won't be news to you much longer."

Whether the remark had any significance remained to be seen. All other indications were the conversations and negotiations may continue this week and into the next.

United States Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith and French Ambassador Yves Chataigneau went to the British Embassy for today's conference.

Moscow Radio Lauds U. S. for a Change

London, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—The Moscow radio lauded Soviet and American contributions to the war against Japan today and said "collaboration between the two countries is just as essential today as it was during the war."

While adopting a somewhat more conciliatory attitude toward the United States than has been evident in recent months, the English-speaking commentator assailed "reactionary circles in America . . . bent on undermining collaboration with the Soviet Union and sowing enmity and hatred for the Soviet Union among the American people."

The broadcast commemorated the Soviet Union's declaration of war against Japan on August 9, 1945, and said the "fighting friendship and partnership" of Americans and Russians made possible the victory over Japan.

"This historic truth has the most profound bearing on the present day," the broadcast said. "From it the people of the Soviet Union and the United States can draw the important conclusions that collaboration between their two countries is just as essential today as it was during the war; that just as it was the collaboration of the great powers that made possible complete victory over the aggressive forces of fascism and militarism, so collaboration can assume a stable and lasting peace at the present time."

Draft Officials Preparing for Registration

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

With registration of men from 18 through 25 to begin August 30, national and local Selective Service officials yesterday readied the peacetime draft machinery for top-speed operation.

In Washington, the Commissioners approved and sent to the White House names of 65 men to staff 10 5-member draft boards and three appeal panels. Names of members of five other boards will be announced later.

At the same time, national Selective Service heads made public the eight-page questionnaire which draft boards will mail to registrants on or before September 7. Also revealed were details of induction procedures.

Names of the draft and appeal board members were handed to the Commissioners by William E. Leahy, District draft director. In approving them, the city heads also okayed Leahy's recommendations for the 15-board setup and his plans to expand them to fit the area covered by the wartime 25 boards.

Men to staff the remaining five boards (No.'s 8, 10, 11, 14 and 15) are still being selected because local draft officials have had difficulty in naming experienced workers to serve on boards in the area where they live.

The draft law provides that each board member must live in the area his board serves, Frank D.

M'Arthur Aide Called Here for Loyalty Check

Tokyo, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—General MacArthur's price and distribution division's chief was under suspension today, on orders from Washington, pending a loyalty check.

The official, Harry F. Alber of Los Angeles, told reporters he never had been a Communist or a member of any front organization. He said he had no idea why the loyalty check was ordered but that twice before he had been investigated by the FBI and other agencies.

"I know I am loyal and I am confident I can be cleared," he declared.

Alber is a veteran both of the Army and of Government service. He joined the Government service in 1934, working with TVA, the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and the OPA.

He was three years in the Army, entering as a private and emerging a lieutenant. He was discharged in Japan, joined the military government and became chief of the price division a year ago.

Alber said the previous investigations were while he was with CAA and OPA. In neither case was he suspended or discharged.

Alber, preparing to return to Washington for the hearing, said in the previous investigations he never was told why his record was being checked. He says he still doesn't know.

Army authorities here advised him the order for his suspension from his $10,000-a-year job came from Washington.

Teacher, Wife Subpenaed By Committee

By The Associated Press

New York, Aug. 10.—Michael Ivanovitch Samarin, the much-sought school teacher, continued in hiding today, although various United States Government agencies obviously knew where he was.

The House Committee on Un-American Activities, which has been probing allegations of Soviet spying in this country, said in Washington it had served subpenas on Samarin and his wife and would examine both in a few days.

It did not say where or when they would testify.

The FBI, which Samarin sought out for an interview Sunday, also remained mum on his hideaway.

Soviet government officials wanted badly to know where he was, in order to send him on his way to Russia. The consulate here again asked the aid of New York police in finding him. The police continued their investigation but declined to say whether they knew the teacher's whereabouts.

The 40-year-old Samarin, who taught at a school for children of Russian United Nations personnel, reportedly has said he does not want to go back to his native land. He also has been quoted as criticising aspects of the Soviet government.

Another former Russian teacher in the school, Mrs. Oksana Stepanovna Kosenkina, 52, remained secluded at the Russian consulate.

The House committee also has shown interest in her. It was advised by the State Department today it had the legal authority to subpena her. But this seemed to be an empty right because the Soviet consulate can be entered only if warrants are obtained alleging the commission of a crime on the property.

The Russian consulate for the second straight day refused to let police talk to Mrs. Kosenkina.

The Soviet officials yesterday asked the police to investigate what they called the kidnaping of the woman teacher by the Tolstoy Foundation, a White Russian group.

Mrs. Kosenkina was taken Sat-

Ullman, Miller And Lee Brand Accusations False At House Hearing

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

In testimony before the House Committee on Un-American Activities three wartime Government employes yesterday denied allegations by Miss Elizabeth T. Bentley that they had given her information while she was a courier for Soviet agents.

These denials were followed by disclosure of an FBI confirmation that Miss Bentley had been a courier for the Soviet Union and as such had been paid $2000 in $20 bills by a First Secretary of the Russian Embassy in 1945. The money, paid Miss Bentley a year after she first told the FBI her story, is now impounded in the possession of this Government.

Miss Bentley had earlier sketched this story briefly on the witness stand before the Senate investigating subcommittee. She was also awarded the Russian "Red Star" for her services.

Story Is Supported

This high Government backing of one part of Miss Bentley's story followed a day in which three men called her "a liar," a "neurotic," and "an unhappy drinker."

The three witnesses yesterday were:

Duncan Chaplin Lee, 33, former lieutenant colonel in the hush-hush Office of Strategic Services, who swore he was not a Communist, knew Miss Bentley well but did not give her any information.

William Ludwig Ullman, 40, former major in the Air Corps, and still a Reserve officer, who would not say whether or not he knew Miss Bentley or whether or not he was a member of the Communist Party on the ground it might incriminate him to answer. He swore he had never given Miss Bentley any information.

Robert T. Miller, former assistant chief of the Division of Research and Publications in the office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs in the State Department, who swore he knew Miss Bentley socially, did not give her any information, and knew also Miss Bentley's boss, Jacob Ben Golos, a Russian secret agent, but did not give him any information either.

Voluntarily Resigned

Miller swore he had voluntarily resigned from the State Department after investigation, with letters of commendation from his superiors.

Later he said he had not known until the committee told him of a memorandum in State Department files from R. L. Bannerman, Office of Controls, to Donald Russell, Assistant Secretary, dated July 24, 1946, recommending he be discharged. The memorandum said that FBI investigation indicated he constituted "a strong risk to the security of departmental functions."

Her face flushing furiously, Miss Bentley sat in the crowded hearing room and heard Lee call her "a nuisance" and suggest she was "not quite rational"; Ullman call her "a liar" and Miller call her "a nuisance" and a heavy drinker.

The Vassar graduate who has said she turned Soviet spy for love of Golos, repented and went to the FBI in 1945, was nevertheless composed when she rose to confront those who accused her.

Oak Ridge Mentioned

After Lee swore he had never given her any information, Miss Bentley testified that in November of 1944 Lee had told her he had word "that something very secret" was going on at Oak Ridge, Tenn., where the atomic energy project is located. He didn't know what it was, she said, but it was something very secret.

Then she told the committee that in the spring of 1944 she met Lee at a corner drug store and he gave her certain other information.

"He was very much upset because he had found out that General Donovan was interested in making an exchange of NKVD agents with OSS men.

"He said that this had been

Hoover Says the 'Fuzzy-Minded' of U. S. Cannot Understand the Word 'America'

West Branch, Iowa, Aug. 10 (A.P.). Former President Herbert Hoover said today there are "fuzzy-minded people" in this country who "never have understood and never will understand what the word 'America' means," but added:

"This new land with all its high promise cannot and will not be conquered except by men inspired from the concepts of free spirit.

"It is those moral and spiritual qualities in free men which fulfill the meaning of the word 'American.' And with them will come centuries of further greatness to our country."

Mr. Hoover's remarks were in an address at his home-coming seventy-fourth birthday celebration.

A fried chicken picnic lunch, a parade and presentation to Hoover of an honorary doctor of humanities degree from Coe College were other highlights of the celebration in this small Quaker community.

The only living former President, born in a two-room cottage, reminisced at length on his early life here.

"The meaning of our word 'America' flows from one pure spring," he said. "The soul of our America is its freedom of mind and spirit in man. Here alone are the open windows through which pours the sunlight of the human spirit. Here alone is human dignity not a dream, but an accomplishment."

Mr. Hoover reviewed his long public life and summed it up in these words:

"I have had every honor to which any man could aspire. There is no place on the whole earth except here in America where all the sons of man could have this chance in life."

Disc Harrow Kills Farmhand, 5th Son To Die in Field

A Bowie farmhand died yesterday—the fifth brother to die in farm accidents.

According to Maryland State Trooper John A. Erouches, the man, Charles Edgar Lloyd, 63, was harrowing with three horses.

A neighbor, William E. Bowers, walked over to see how the work was coming along. He discovered Lloyd's body sprawled on the ground, the left leg severed and his arms, head and neck badly lacerated. The horses, still harnessed to the harrow, were grazing along a nearby fence.

According to Wylie Foster, owner of the farm, Lloyd had four brothers, all killed in farm accidents. Five children, two sons and three daughters, all of Baltimore, survive him.

Comintern's Death Faked, Writer Says

By Igor Gouzenko

Installment IV

(This is the story of the former Russian cipher expert who exposed Stalin's spy ring in Canada in September, 1945. It is a story unfolding again today—here.—Editor's note.)

The dissolution of the Comintern as announced by Moscow in 1943 was hailed by the Allied world as a profoundly significant move in the direction of better understanding between the Soviet and democratic worlds.

Yet it was, in reality, one of the shrewdest pieces of international hoodwinking in historical record.

You will recall that the late President Roosevelt had flatly denounced the Comintern as being an "impossible barrier" to mutual trust and cooperation. He had stressed that it was the Soviet's own business if it wanted a Communist system in Russia, but the maintenance of a Comintern—abbreviated form of "Communist International"—with the avowed purpose of fomenting revolution abroad and establishing Communist states, did place a severe strain on ties of friendship."

So the Comintern was dissolved, and the misguided democratic world rejoiced.

A glance at your newspaper will show that the former Comintern officers had little difficulty in finding new employment. The Comintern was never dissolved. Its leaders were kept for wider Soviet plans. They became the viceroys of the new Soviet Empire.

Dimitrov is now dictator of Bulgaria. Beirut is president of Poland. Togliatti became top Communist in postwar Italy. Thorez and Duclos, of course, did a thorough Red job in France. So it would seem that roses under any other name can be just as Red. It also became apparent in the subsequent Canadian spy trials that the Soviet, even without an official Comintern, has a way of getting things done in trusting democratic countries.

During the year of maneuvering that led up to the Comintern's "dissolution," I occupied a ringside seat at intelligence headquarters to which I had been assigned after completion of my cipher course in April, 1942. Although the true significance of events was naturally not apparent to us during the various stages, we did end up with a proper perspective; something which I note, many international thinkers still have not attained.

Up to 1943 the chief intelligence headquarters of the Red army fulfilled a double task. It directed intelligence work abroad and at the fronts. Because of the increased activities abroad and the great importance placed on this work, the Soviet government in March, 1943, officially divided this organization into two bodies, strategic intelligence and tactical intelligence.

Yet even as loud praises poured upon the Soviet from abroad, we on the "inside" were informed that headquarters would now concentrate its major forces on intelligence abroad. The division within headquarters' circles also anticipated future specialization of strategic intelligence, the enlargement of the system, and the placing of the most able and dependable people within that system. A similar reorganization was conducted at approximately the same time in NKVD and naval intelligence.

With the reorganization, Headquarters assumed the proportions of a large ministry. In addition to the building on the square at Kropotkin Gate, it now occupied the many storied house which covered a whole block at Znamenskii 19. There were also several auxiliary buildings, including a factory for producing photographic materials and a printing plant for handling bulletins and reports by the bushel.

Headquarters also took over the administration of several institutes, including two military institutes for foreign languages in Moscow and Tbilici (Tiflis), the Higher School of the Red Army known as the Intelligence Academy; all kinds of special intelligence courses in frontier military districts, cipher courses, radio courses and finally, a considerable number of special schools for the training of agents. Such schools are still located in the outskirts of Moscow, Leningrad and Baku—the Persian group. Besides the central Headquarters in Moscow, there are branch Headquarters established in Khabarovsk, Ufa, Kiev, Odessa and Batum, for work against Turkey.

Some idea of the magnitude of this new intelligence setup, supplanting the "dissolved" Comintern, may be gleaned from the fact that there are approximately 5000 people employed in Moscow headquarters.

Military Intelligence took over the old chores of the Comintern. It became an active part of the Soviet Fifth Column in democratic countries. Its ultimate aim, as outlined in black and white on our "confidential" forms, was the undermining of democratic countries from within and the designing of a plan for delivering major crippling blows when and if ordered to do so by the Soviet government. Meanwhile, the "daily tasks" of Strategic Intelligence staffs amounted to the following: presentation of a true and thorough picture of political, economic and military happenings and trends in all countries.

It was stressed that the best way to achieve the ultimate aim as well as worthwhile daily results in obtaining information was "to infiltrate unnoticed into the vital organs of the democracies, to plant agents in key points of political, economic and military administration."

We gleaned a revealing hint on how important the Soviet government rated the new intelligence organization from an order over Stalin's own signature raising Ilyichev, Chief of Main Intelligence Headquarters, to the rank of lieutenant-general.

That was in 1943. The former political commissar was now placed on a par with two members of the mighty Politburo, members Zhdanov and Khrushchev, who were publicly honored by being given the same rank. This was Stalin's official way of "rating" officials for public and private consideration.

By making Ilychev one of his closest assistants, Stalin showed the world that he was placi g national and international spying on a level unprecedented even in the most active days of the Comintern.

To my surprise, I discovered later that the democracies had been too blinded by the "dissolution" of the Comintern to perceive that the very same thing was being done under a different guise, and on an even bigger scale.

urday by consulate officials from a farm operated by the foundation at Valley Cottage, N. Y. The officials said they rescued her but Countess Alexandra Tolstoy, head of the foundation, insisted the teacher came there of her free w'll.

The New York Times, meanwhile, said that a subpoena from the House Un-American Committee was served on Samarin on a midtown Manhattan street shortly before noon today.

The subpoena directed Samarin to appear "forthwith" before the committee, the Times said.

A second subpoena from the committee, the Times said, was served today on Samarin's wife who, it said, was in hiding on a farm near Freehold, N. J. The couple's three children, the Times said, were with Mrs. Samarin.

The newspaper said Samarin came out of hiding twice today—once when he accepted the subpoena and a second time when he appeared at the Times office to make a statement.

Samarin, after taking the subpoena, told a Times reporter that he wanted to tell an official body "about the totalitarian technique and practice of the Soviet dictatorship."

Samarin said he and his family had left New York on July 31, the night they were scheduled to sail for Russia on the liner Pobeda, the Times said.

He said they subsequently stayed in seclusion on the farm near Freehold for a week. The alleged "kidnaping" of Mrs. Kosenkina, the Times said, caused Samarin to return to New York.

Later, the Times said, Samarin appeared at its offices and offered a formal statement, which said:

"First, the subpoenas by the Committee on Un-American Activities were issued for me and my wife at my request because I want to talk to some official American body.

"Second, I am not being held against my own will, either by American police or by anyone else.

"Third, in my statement to the New York Times on Monday, I said I was placing myself under the protection of the American government and American public opinion. I want to add to that declaration that my wife and I desire voluntarily to renounce our Soviet citizenship. We will not under any conditions return to Russia and certain death.

'Met' Heads Weigh Billy Rose Offer To Act as Angel

New York, Aug. 10 (NYHT). The Metropolitan Opera Association had before it tonight an offer by Billy Rose, columnist and showman, to "undertake the operation of the Metropolitan Opera House for one season and personally guarantee it against deficit."

George A. Sloan, chairman of the Metropolitan board of directors, disclosed he had written Rose promising to pass along the proposal to the board "at the first opportunity.

Sloan's reply pointed out, however, that since Rose had written his letter, the Metropolitan had agreed to meet with the heads of 12 labor unions to discuss the cancellation of the 1948-49 season. He indicated any action on Rose's proposal would be taken after the meeting, probably sometime Thursday.

Rose wrote that he believed that "a bit of streamlining would find favor with lovers of good music," adding that his offer was made "on condition that I be given a free hand and allowed to clean house."

brought up in a meeting of, I should say, the top command of the country—the top man from the Navy—Admiral Leahy was there, J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Bureau was there, I think a representative of Roosevelt, and all the top people. He described that meeting in detail to me. He even went into such details as the fact that Admiral Leahy was definitely against such an exchange."

Stopped by Committee Counsel

At this point she was stopped by Committee Counsel Robert T. Stripling, who said the committee should hear such details as this in executive session.

Her testimony was placed before the FBI in 1945. It formed the basis of part of the case recently laid before a Federal grand jury in New York, which is now in recess.

After Miss Bentley finished detailing this and other information she claimed she received from Lee, Lee arose and flatly denied he had ever given her any such information.

Representatives F. Edward Hebert (D., La.) and Karl Mundt (R., S. Dak.) joined in a demand yesterday that when the case is over the Department of Justice take action to prosecute some witnesses in the case for perjury. It was obvious the committee was certainly hearing some perjured testimony from one said or the other, they said, and it should be possible to check details and find out which one of their witnesses was lying.

Lee Knew Miss Bentley

Lee, a Rhodes scholar, testified that he knew Miss Bentley as Helen Grant. He had been introduced to her, he said, in October, 1943, by Miss Mary Price, former secretary of Walter Lippmann, who is now organizer of the Wallace Progressive Party in North Carolina.

He testified that he knew Jacob Golos, too. He had met him, he said, after he met Miss Bentley and knew him casually as her friend and only socially. Lee testified he met Golos at a restaurant on 15th st., the 823.

Miss Bentley confirmed that. But, she said, Lee knew it wasn't a social call.

"Golos introduced himself as a high functionary of the Communist Party, explained that they were very much interested in the material Mr. Lee was furnishing, and had a long chat with him on the type of information that was available and what he should look for."

Golos Needed "Front"

Previously Miss Bentley had testified Golos was convicted of being an unregistered foreign agent for Russia in 1940 and therefore had to find someone else to front for his business because he was too closely identified as a Communist.

In his formal statement before the committee, Lee said:

"I want to say categorically that I am not and have never been a Communist and that I have never divulged classified information to any unauthorized persons. I had been an assistant in the legal offices of General Donovan before the war; I had come to OSS with him as his assistant; and I was therefore particularly aware of a requirement of personal loyalty to him in such matters along with my loyalty to the service of the United States.

"During the war my wife and I met Miss Bentley socially at the home of a friend. We met a great many people at this time. Thereafter, we saw Miss Bentley off and on for a little over a year. Our acquaintance was entirely a social one.

War Record Cited

"I made it a rule during my service with OSS never to discuss anything that had not previously appeared in the newspaper, and then only to the extent made public. I certainly kept strictly to this rule in any talks I ever had with Miss Bentley."

He described his war record as an honorable one, and said "it is a profound shock to find my name and war record attacked by the irresponsible charges of this woman."

"It is hard for me to believe that Miss Bentley's statements are those of a rational person. In trying to recall my acquaintance with Miss Bentley I have been puzzled that I do not remember that she ever tried to get any information out of me.

"In view of that fact I am tempted to believe that Miss Bentley used her social relationship with me merely to help her misrepresent to her employers for her own personal build-up that she had access through me to someone of the importance of General Donovan."

Says Lee Became Frightened

Miss Bentley said that originally Lee knew her only as a Communist but from the spring of 1944 on he must have suspected she was also a Russian agent.

She thought so, he said, because when he told her of the proposed exchange between OSS and NKVD, in the spring of 1944, he was quite frightened and said:

"If they come over here, they will come up to my house, knock on the door, shake my hand and say, 'Comrade, well done.'"

To Lee's denial of being a Communist she replied:

"I brought him Communist Party literature, I collected his Communist Party dues. I was told he was a member in New York and that he was made a member at large in charge of Mary Price."

Hebert demanded that Mary Price be brought for questioning. Thomas said everyone connected with the case will be subpenaed.

When Ullman came to the stand he was accompanied by counsel, David Rein, who was associated in the defense of Gerhart Eisler, Russian agent convicted of passport fraud.

In his formal statement Ullman said he was born in Springfield, Mo., in 1908. He said he was educated at Philips Exeter Academy and Harvard University and Drury College.

He left the Air Forces, he said, with a major's commission.

"The scurrilous charges against me by Miss Bentley before this committee are false. I state categorically that she is a liar. I am and always have been a loyal American citizen. I never have betrayed any confidence reposed in me by my Government. I am not and never have been a spy or an agent of a foregin government. I have never photographed any Government documents."

Miss Bentley had earlier charged Ullman was official photographer for the group headed by Nathan Gregory Silvermaster, former Treasury agent, and that Ullman had photographed secret Government documents.

Refuses to Answer

Ullman refused to answer as to whether he had secret information while he was attached to the Air Forces on the ground it would be self-incriminating. He refused to say whether or not he helped set up a photographic laboratory in the home of Silvermaster, with whom he lived, on the ground that would be self-incriminating.

He refused to say whether or not he knew photography or whether or not he was ever in the basement of the Silvermaster home on the ground that would be self-incriminating.

He even refused to say whether or not he could play tennis. At this point a crowded hearing room burst into delighted laughter. Spectators apparently were unaware Miss Bentley earlier had testified that when she met Ullman he told her he had been some sort of tennis professional.

Ullman declined to say whether or not he knew Lauchlin Currie, former administrative assistant to President Roosevelt, on the ground it might tend to ineriminate him. He also declined to say whether he knew Irving S. Friedman in the Treasury Department, and declined to say whether he gave Currie as a reference for the Treasury job. The job was under Harry Dexter White.

Ullman, who had refused to say whether or not he was a member of the Communist Party, also refused to say whether or not he thought a Communist could be a loyal American citizen.

Ullman Consults Counsel

Committee members called attention to his statement that he was a loyal American citizen when they questioned him on this point.

Finaly he consulted his counsel.

Representative Karl W. Mundt (R., S. Dak.) pressed for an answer.

"In other words, as a retired major of the United States Army," queried Mundt, "a man who has been entrusted with a lot of high governmental responsibilities, as a mature citizen and a graduate of two colleges, you don't consider yourself competent to declare whether or not a man can be a loyal American citizen and a member of the Communist Party at one and the same time?"

"That is correct, sir," replied Ullman, continuing to refuse an answer.

Herbert queried as to Ullman's statement that the charges against him are under investigation by a grand jury. Ullman agreed that the grand jury is in recess and that "no true bill" has been returned clearing him of the charges.

D clines to Answer

Then Herbert pressed again.

Didn't you tell the FBI agents that you had been a member of the Communist Party?"

Ullman declined to answer on the grounds of self-incrimination.

"Didn't you tell the FBI agents that you did have photographic equipment?"

Again Ullman declined to answer.

Hebert asked what Ullman would say if he told him the FBI had given this information to the committee.

"There is nothing to say to that. If they told you, they told you."

Representative Richard Nixon (R., Calif.) asked Ullman if he and Silvermaster were maintaining any photographic equipment at their home in Harvey Cedars, N. J., where they have lived for the last year.

"I refuse to answer that question on the ground that it might said.

Miller On Stand

Miller, the third witness, testified he was born in Pittsburgh, Pa., and graduated from Kent School in Connecticut and Princeton. He was accompanied by Betram Bakerman as counsel.

Miller said he had first known Miss Bentley under the name of Helen Johns. He also knew Golos, he said, under the name of John Friedman. He knew him, he said, when he was editing a news letter about Latin America in New York with a partner named Jack B. Fahy, now deceased.

Later he was asked if this were the same Jack Fahy who was a member of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade.

He replied that it was.

"Do you know what the Abraham Lincoln Brigade is?" demanded Hebert.

"It was an organization of men in this country who were stirred by what was happening in Spain and went over there to fight for the Republican government," replied Miller.

Committee records showed Miller's counsel also listed as a member of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade.

Miller said he was a neighbor of Silvermaster, knew him very well, but never discussed Communism or the Communist form of government with him or with Golos. Silvermaster was born in Odessa, Russia, and is described in records of this Government as an important Communist and a probable agent of the NKVD.

Miller said he met his wife, the former Jenny Levy, in Moscow. At first when asked her name he protested that possibly it was being asked only because she was Jewish. Later the committee developed the fact that his wife had been employed on the staff of the Moscow Daily News. Of course, she was not o Communist, Miller protested.

Then he said she had been discharged from the staff "for frivolity."

"She was discharged for frivolity?" queried Hebert.

Wife Went to Russia

"She was conside.ed to be too much of a gay American who wanted fun," returned Miller.

His wife, he said, went to Russia during the depression "because she was interested in dancing." He said she considered the Russian ballet the best in the world.

Miller swore flatly he had never known a Communist in this country.

When he knew Miss Bentley, he declared, he couldn't see any sign of radical or Communist tendencies. Nor, he added, was there any indication whatever hat she was seeking information from him.

He said he had not seen Miss Bentley since 1944, after the acquaintance became "a nuisance" to him.

He would have lunch or dinner with her, he said, occasionally. "She was under some nervous tension of some kind apparently, and she had begun to drink, and she showed up at a couple of these meetings in not a very happy condition."

AVC Will Decide This Month On Ejection of Communists

The governing body of the American Veterans Committee will decide this month whether an AVC member may be a member of the Communist Party and still be considered as acting in good faith toward the veterans' group.

Need for the decision arose when two AVC members, Forrest Finley, Washington correspondent for the Oregon Journal and a resident at 1908 N. Taylor st., Arlington, and Wadsworth Likely, local branch manager of Radio Reports, Inc., who lives at 6622 Broad st., Brookmont, Md., wrote the AVC's administrative committee to question membership of John Gates.

Gates is editor of the Communist Party paper, the Daily Worker. He is one of 12 persons charged with being Communist leaders whom a New York grand jury recently indicted because they allegedly seek overthrow of the Government.

After receiving the letter sent by Likely and Finley, the National Administrative Committee of AVC stated that the "principles of the Communist Party are inconsistent with the principles of the American Veterans Committee" and asked that AVC determine whether Gates is a Communist.

A hearing has been scheduled August 27 in New York by the National Planning Committee, governing body of the AVC, to determine the facts in the Gates case, and to decide whether AVC national policy agrees with the recommendations of the administrative committee, which has asked ouster from the AVC of any Communist Party member.

Reds Hit U. S. Plan To Return Trieste

All Fighters

Red Planes Buzz British, U. S. Zones

Berlin, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Two formations of Russian Yak fighter planes "buzzed" the American and British sectors of Berlin tonight in an implicit threat to force down Allied planes supplying blockaded Berlin.

About 20 of the fast Russian fighters were visible as they roared in formations over the western sectors of the city in violation of all air safety rules.

British authorities announced they woud protest the flights to the four-power safety center.

Last Friday Russian air officials charged American and British planes with 62 violations of air safety rules in supplying Berlin, including low altitude flights over Soviet air installations.

The French-licensed newspaper Kurier quoted German railroad officials as saying that traffic on the Russian-blockaded railroad between Berlin and the western zones could be resumed whenever the Russians gave the word.

W. Stuart Symington, United States Air Force secretary, and Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, Chief of Air Staff, arrived at Wiesbaden tonight.

Lake Success, Aug. 10 (AP).—Russia today rejected a United States demand that Trieste be given back to Italy and accused the Western powers of creating a German-patterned bizonia in the Adriatic free territory.

Deputy Foreign Minister Jakob A. Malik told the Security Council that 21 nations had ratified the Italian peace treaty and any move to revise it was "unacceptable" to the Soviet Union. Britain and France support the American demand.

Malik said the United States and Britain were trying to sabotage the treaty and following the same policy of dismemberment used in Germany. What they are doing, he added, is creating a bizonia in Trieste and annexing it to Italy.

Deny Yugoslavian Charges

Malik then backed Yugoslavia's charges that the United States and Britain have violated the treaty in the administration of their zone. The Western powers promptly denied the allegations with American Delegate Philip C. Jessup accusing Marshal Tito of trying to annex the internationalized territory to Yugoslavia.

After hearing Malik, the Council adjourned until Friday, when debate will continue.

Jessup declared Yugoslavia's complaint against the U. S.-British administration was an attempt to cover up Tito's moves to swallow Trieste and to distract attention from Yugoslavia's own sins of bad administration.

Condemned in Russian Words

"I hope you will all keep in mind that the government which made these accusations against us itself rules a zone in the free territory of Trieste behind an iron curtain of its own," Jessup said.

Britain's Sir Alexander Cadogan used Russian newspaper clippings to support charges that Yugoslavia is using police state methods in Trieste.

Cadogan told the Security Council the following quotations were taken from an article appearing July 25 in all principal newspapers in the Soviet Union:

"The party has been placed under the supervision of a man who, combining the posts of Minister of State Security and Organizing Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, is making wide use of police methods in international party affairs.

"This system of terrorism and repression is evidence that the leaders of the Communist Party of Yugoslavia have embarked on a path of adopting Fascist methods."

Russians Rule Dairen Area

Shanghai, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—A Russian-controlled government in the Dairen-Port Arthur area is restricting the movements and activities of all except Soviet citizens, Isaac Patch, jr., United States vice consul at Dairen, said today.

Patch arrived here en route to his Gloucester, Mass., home. It took him six weeks to make the trip from Dairen, normally a two-day plane ride.

He said his own movements in Dairen were restricted despite his diplomatic status. Patch, his wife and two daughters and other members of the consular staff were the only Americans there.

About 10,000 Russians are in the Manchurian port, half of them soldiers, Patch said. Although a Chinese mayor and officials are in the city government, in accordance with the 1945 Russo-Chinese treaty, Patch said they actually were appointed by Soviet administrators in nearby Port Arthur.

Japan C. of C. Formed

Tokyo, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Representatives of more than 30 American firms today attended the organization session of the American Chamber of Commerce in Japan.

Greeks Launch New Offensive

Athens, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—The Greek army today opened a new drive against guerillas entrenched on 5000-foot Mount Alevitsa, and the government predicted that rebel-held "free Greece" would be wiped out "in a matter of days."

A communique said that the fifteenth division, supported by a 30-ton British Centaur tank, was attacking Alevitsa—the east-flank guerilla stronghold which stopped the June offensive.

Government sources said the fall of the mountain position is expected within a day or two. The victory would give the Greek army a commanding position less than a mile and a half from the Albanian border.

Soviet Hand Is Called on Free Danube

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Aug. 10 (AP).—The United States challenged Russia tonight to prove it really wants free navigation on the Danube River. The challenge came after the western powers lost earlier efforts to open up Europe's important inland waterway.

American Ambassador Cavendish Cannon placed the issue before the Danube conference, demanding approval of an amendment guaranteeing against discrimination on the basis of "the flag or ownership of vessels or any other basis whatsoever."

"If this conference supports the principle of free navigation it can hardly reject this amendment," Cannon said. "If it does it will serve notice to the whole world who is for discrimination and who is not."

The United States proposal was made in the form of an amendment to the first article of the new Danube shipping convention which, as drafted by Russia, would indorse the principles of free navigation without specific antidiscrimination terms.

Russia and her satellites defeated French and American attempts to revise the preamble and to broaden its terms in the interests "of all nations."

Resistance Reported in Soviet Mines

Berlin, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—A strong German resistance group has been active for months in the uranium mines in the Erz Mountains in the Russian occupation zone, well-informed Allied and German sources reported today.

The resistance group has engaged in sabotage and aided slave laborers to escape to the Western occupation zones, the reports said.

The informants said the men were members of the movement organized by German Field Marshal Friedrich von Paulus, captured by the Russians at Stalingrad, and presumably all were indoctrinated in Communist ideology.

The sabotage was said to have been conducted by war prisoners working in the mines.

The British-licensed DPD news agency reported also that 500 Russian soldiers, engaged in extensive Red army maneuvers had deserted in the Wittenberg area near the border of the British occupation zone.

2 Germans Executed For Murdering DP

Munich, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Two German civilians convicted by the Military Government of robbing and murdering a Jewish displaced person were executed by a U. S. Army firing squad today in the Landsberg prison courtyard.

The Bavarian military government said this was the first death sentence for civil crimes carried out by the U. S. Army. The executed men were Rudolf Gabler, 21, and Ferdinand Lechner, 25.

Puerto Rico Strike Ends

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Gov. Jesus Pinero announced today that a dock workers' strike which paralyzed shipping throughout the island since July 21 has been settled and that longshoremen will return to work Wednesday.

Foe of Czech Regime Flees To U. S. Zone

Frankfurt, Germany, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Dr. Petr Zenkl, anti-Communist elder statesman of Czechoslovakia, has been smuggled to safety in the U. S. zone of Germany by members of a democratic underground in the Czechoslovak army, refugee camp officials announced today.

Zenkl

Zenkl told camp officials that anti-Communist "partisans" infiltrated the army guard that had been set to watch him and slipped him and his wife out of the country along with 11 other refugees.

Zendl was Deputy Premier and head of the National Socialist Party—strongest non-Communist political organization in Czechoslovakia—at the time of the Communists' February coup. He was dismissed from the cabinet and placed under army guard after the Communists seized power.

The white-haired political leader was a prominent member of several prewar Czech governments. During the war, he spent six years in a Nazi concentration camp.

RCAF Continues Search For Dr. Murray's Plane

Edmonton, Alberta, Aug. 9 (U.P.).—RCAF and civilian airplanes searched unsuccessfully the area between here and Grand Prairie, Alberta, today for a missing plane piloted by Dr. Vance B. Murray of the United States Public Health Service, whose Washington address is 4309 Van Ness st. nw.

RCAF officials said they expected more than 10 planes to continue the hunt tomorrow morning. Dr. Murray first was reported missing Saturday after he left here for Grand Prairie on the first leg of a vacation flight to Fairbanks, Alaska.

U. S. Is Considering 3 Steps To Aid Government of Israel

The State Department reported yesterday that extension of full diplomatic recognition and a loan of around 100 million dollars to Israel is under consideration.

A third step toward strengthening relations between the two countries, United States support of Israel's future application for membership in the United Nations, will be given "sympathetic" consideration at the proper time, Department Press Officer Michael J. McDermott said.

McDermott and White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross meantime denied a report published in the New York Star that Secretary of State George C. Marshall had threatened to resign if the three-point program were put into effect. The Star said Marshall objected to the plan which reportedly was supported by Mr. Truman.

Jewish Peace Plea Rejected by Arabs

Alexandria, Egypt, Aug. 10 (AP).—A source close to the Arab League said today it has rejected a Jewish invitation to start peace talks on Palestine.

Foreign Minister Moshe Shertok of Israel last week requested Count Folke Bernadotte, United Nations mediator for Palestine, to invite the Arab states to enter peace talks.

The informant said the proposal was rejected on the premise that Arabs did not recognize "any such gang as the pseudo-government of Israel, which has no international status."

Truman May Give 1st Talk in Detroit

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, yesterday urged President Truman to make his first speech of the 1948 campaign on Labor Day at Detroit.

It is expected that Mr. Truman will follow his campaign manager's advice, provided all labor groups in the Michigan city agree to join in the rally.

Late yesterday it was not certain that such an agreement had been worked out.

If the Chief Executive does go to Detroit, it won't necessarily be the kick-off for an extensive campaign swing. More likely, he will return to Washington, and start his barnstorming later on.

Talking to reporters in the White House lobby yesterday, National Chairman McGrath said that President Truman is going to make several trips around the country.

"He is going to travel by train, plane and maybe Mississippi River boat," McGrath said.

He smiled when he mentioned Mississippi River boat. However, in Providence the other night, McGrath said that Mr. Truman is "sure to go into the South."

Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, Democratic vice presidential nominee, today will make his third visit to the White House since the Philadelphia convention. He will be accompanied by Leslie Biffle, secretary of the Senate Minority Police Committee, and by officers of the newly formed Truman-Barkley Club.

These officers are Welburn Mayock of Los Angeles, treasurer; Stephen Harrington of St. Paul, secretary; M. R. Evans of Louisville, trustee, and John Nangle of St. Louis, trustee.

Gov. Roy J. Turner of Oklahoma is national chairman of the Truman-Barkley Club. He is now traveling about the country and won't be at the White House today.

Senator Barkley, Biffle and the club officials will talk with Mr. Truman in his office at 12:30 o'clock and then will walk over to the mansion for luncheon.

Maurice J. Tobin, former Governor of Massachusetts, whose nomination to be Secretary of Labor was ignored by the Senate in the closing hours of the special session, called on Mr. Truman yesterday.

He later told reporters he had not made up his mind whether to accept an interim appointment. He said he expected to give his answer to Mr. Truman in 48 hours.

Tobin explained that his name still is on the ballot in Massachusetts as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor. He said that while he appreciated the honor Mr. Truman had conferred on him with the offer of a Cabinet post, he had personal obligations in the Bay State which had to be considered.

He was asked about the political outlook in his home State.

"Unquestionably Mr. Truman will carry Massachusetts," he said, and he added that he really meant it.

Max Zaritsky, head of the AFL Hatters Union, was another White House caller yesterday. He said the 40,000 members of his union are going to support President Truman and the Democratic platform.

Zaritsky, who presented Mr. Truman with a dark gray beaver felt hat, also predicted that the Liberal Party in New York, after a vain effort to draft Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, would be solidly behind the Truman-Barkley ticket in November.

loans and 90 per cent builders' loans.

6. Permit Government loans on veterans' cooperatives, boosting the allowable cost from $1350 per room to $8100 a unit. There is an alternate ceiling of $1800 per room.

7. Authorize 90 per cent loans on nonveterans cooperatives.

8. Permit 10 per cent loans on construction, mainly in rural and semirural areas, of homes costing not more than $4500. The present ceiling is $3000.

9. Permit banks to sell on to the Government as much as 50 per cent of their GI and FHA insured mortgages acquired after April 30, 1948. The earlier limit was only 25 per cent.

But President Truman said the bill "falls far short of the legislation which could and should have been enacted."

In a statement issued shortly after he signed the measure, Mr. Truman said:

"The most astonishing part of the process by which this result was achieved is that the members of the House of Representatives were never permitted to consider and vote on the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. Even though all the main provisions of that bill were favorably reported by the House Committee on Banking and Currency, the Republican leaders refused to let the full membership of the House consider it."

Lists Act's "Inadequacies"

He listed the points on which he said the "compromise" GOP bill "fell short" of the T-E-W measure:

"The new bill fails to make any provision for low-rent public housing.

"It fails to make any provision for slum clearance and urban redevelopment."

"It fails to include any provision for special aids for farm housing."

"In short," he said, "the Congress in enacting this bill has deliberately neglected those large groups of our people most in need of adequate housing—the people who are forced to live in disgraceful urban and rural slums."

McMath Leads in Ark. Democratic Primary

Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 10 (AP).—With nearly one fourth of the precincts reported, Sidney S. McMath had a 1400 vote lead over former Attorney General Jack Holt for the Arkansas democratic gubernatorial nomination in today's primary.

The count in 520 of the State's 2236 precincts was McMath 22,965, Holt 21,150.

In the contest for national committeeman, Dr. R. B. Robins of Camden was leading Dr. Fred G. White of Fort Smith, 17,286 to 10,311 in 358 precincts.

Representative Jim Trible of Berryville was well ahead of Charles B. Ivy of Bentonville in the race for Third District Congressman. The count in 56 precincts was trimble 2063, Ivy 554.

The Gallup Poll

Truman Tops Dewey in Poll Of Manual Workers, Unions

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 10.—Although the Republican Party is stronger today than at any time in 16 years, it still has not succeeded in breaking the Democratic hold on two large and important voting elements—manual workers and members of labor unions.

The working man's vote is not as sodidly Democratic as in the days of the late Mr. Roosevelt. Henry A. Wallace's third party has cut into it considerably. Nevertheless the vote of this section of the population still leans toward the Democrats and will be of great aid to President Truman in November. The CIO is reported ready to take active part in support of the Democratic Party, as in previous years.

From coast to coast voters were asked:

"If the presidential election were being held TODAY, how would you vote—for Truman, for Dewey or for Wallace?"

MANUAL WORKERS

Truman	45%
Dewey	38
Wallace	6
No opinion	11

With the undecided or no opinion eliminated the result is 50 per cent for Truman, 43 per cent for Dewey and 7 per cent for Wallace.

All persons in the poll sample who indicated that they are members of labor unions voted as follows on the presidential preference question:

UNION MEMBERS

Truman	46%
Dewey	38
Wallace	7
No opinion	9

With the no opinion eliminated the vote is 50 per cent for Truman, 42 per cent for Dewey and 8 per cent for Wallace.

Reports issued during recent weeks by the Institute show the pattern of political opinion this year shaping up as follows. The following table gives the vote with the no opinion percentage, which runs to 10 per cent nationally, eliminated:

	Dewey	Truman	Wallace
Farmers	55%	43%	2%
Manual Workers	43	50	7
Union Members	42	50	8
ALL U. S.	53	41	6

The democratic percentage among manual workers and union members is down considerable from other years. The drop is partly due to gains made by the Republicans and partly to the fact that Mr. Wallace splits the Democratic vote. A substantial proportion of the Wallace support among workers and union members is comprised of workers who voted Democratic in 1944. If Wallace were not in the race, the Democratic vote among that group would be overwhelming.

The trend in the last three presidential elections follows:

MANUAL WORKERS

	Voted Dem.	Voted Rep.
1936 elect.	74%	26%
1940 "	66	34
1944 "	62	38
*TODAY	50	43

*Wallace vote, not included in the table, totals 7 per cent of those with opinions.

	Voted Dem.	Voted Rep.
1936	80%	20%
1940	72	28
1944	72	28
*TODAY	50	42

*Wallace vote 8 per cent.

Confident Dewey May Cut Speaking Dates

By The Associated Press

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey was described by friends yesterday as so confident of election victory he may make fewer than 10 major campaign speeches.

The Republican campaign course will not be fixed finally until an Albany meeting next week with Gov. Earl Warren of California, Dewey's running mate.

But the signs now point to a sharp contrast between the GOP nominee's carefully-paced bid for November support and the sort of whistle stop speaking drive planned for President Truman by the Democratic National Committee.

If early plans jell, friends said Dewey may make one long campaign tour by train. After that he may fly to fill individual speaking dates, returning to Albany after each.

Republicans have no financial troubles, but the Democrats are reported still to lack the cash to put on as big a drive as they would like.

Dewey's associates have been going around Capitol Hill patting themselves on the back because they say the New York Governor didn't fall into what they call a Democratic trap and let himself get embroiled in the Truman-Congress row.

Estimates vary on who came off with the political plums in the special session. Most Democrats and Republicans agree privately that Mr. Truman had the edge in the inflation-housing argument but shot too fast from the hip in his criticism of the Communists-in-Government investigations.

Lucas Sees Truman Gains

Whatever the verdict, Senator Lucas of Illinois, assistant party leader, said Mr. Truman succeeded in pepping up the Democratic organization in the country. He added that the President seems to be solidifying organized labor support behind him.

But Senator Taft of Ohio, chairman of the GOP policy committee, said he thinks the signs are "very favorable" for a Republican sweep in November.

Some Republicans have been worrying about the possibility of losing control of the Senate, where their margin now is 51 to 45 for the Democrats.

Warren Asks State Control

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—Gov. Earl Warren of California, Republican vice presidential nominee, today called for "decentralization of authority because the strength of the Republic depends largely on the virility of the State and local governments."

"Unfortunately," Warren added in a Saturday Evening Post article, "one school of political thought puts the reverse English on this principle, and that is responsible for the top-heavy, expensive government bureaus that are a public burden today.

"The greatest evil is not the cost of these bureaus, but the fact that they get farther and farther away from the people."

Warren made these observations in a discussion of "California's Biggest Headache—" the influx of three million new residents into the State during the past decade.

"Everything that can be solved by the State should be solved on that level," he noted. "Only if problems cross the boundary line or when the State can't care for the needs of the people does it become the duty of the Federal Government to act, and even these programs should be carried out, wherever possible, without setting up a central administration in Washington."

D.C. Campaign Office Opened By Democrats

A. L. Wheeler, newly elected chairman of the Democratic central committee here, yesterday opened Washington campaign headquarters—1336 New York ave. nw.—with a fresh plea for District suffrage.

Wheeler

The 30-year-old attorney, who served as honorary chairman of the recent Democratic convention in Philadelphia, announced that absentee ballots will be available at the new offices "for every State in the Union." He said a series of evening speeches dealing with campaign issues will be held next week.

Wheeler, a native of Atlanta, Ga., succeeded Melvin Hildreth as chairman of the committee. Hildreth earlier had been named a national committeeman.

Others elected, in balloting Monday night, included: Arthur Clarendon Smith, local businessman, and Clement F. Preller, president of the Central Labor Union here, vice chairmen; Gerhard P. Van Arkel, former general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, secretary; William L. Houston, former member of the Board of Education, treasurer; Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commanding general of the District National Guard, finance officer.

Elected as alternates to the national committeeman and national committeewoman, Wheeler said, were Tilford E. Dudley and Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley.

He said the committee, governing unit of the local Democratic Party, voted to indorse the Truman-Barkley ticket.

Month Enough Of Legal Reno Prostitution

Reno, Nev., Aug. 10 (AP).—A month of its old prewar legalized prostitution was just about enough for Reno.

The city council last night took the first step toward banning prostitution permanently.

A measure was introduced to repeal a section of the present city ordinance permitting houses of prostitution to operate under city license when 250 feet from a public street or alley. Final action is slated August 23.

In prewar years, Reno's police-guarded stockade housing prostitution was a tourist attraction from a distance.

When the Army established an air base here, it insisted the stockade be closed for the war period.

As a result, prostitution assumed the same status in Reno as in most other cities until July 9, when District Judge Merwyn Brown ruled the war emergency at an end and the ordinances once more valid.

One establishment promptly opened for business, and obtained a building permit to double its facilities.

Church and other interests immediately launched a campaign and Mayor Francis R. Smith announced the council would act on repeal of the ordinance.

Roadway Changes Hearing Put Off Until Sept. 10

A hearing scheduled today on changes in the roadway at the intersection of Pennsylvania and Constitution aves. nw., has been postponed to September 10, at 10 a.m. in the District Building.

The session, which will be held by the District Commissioners and the District Public Utilities Commission sitting as a joint board, will consider relocation of utility facilities, as well as traffic at the crossing.

Reason for the postponement was the continuation of the Capital Transit Co. fare increase hearings, according to E. J. Milligan, secretary of the joint board.

Greatest Corn Crop In History Seen

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Government Crop Reporting Board came up yesterday with some amazing predictions for this year's harvests.

It predicted 3½ billion bushels of corn—America's greatest crop. It was last year's miserably short corn crop—only 2400 million bushels—that brought about the present meat shortage—particularly beef, pork, and poultry. But this year's crop, the board estimates, will be:

1. Eight per cent bigger than the all-time record crop of 3250 million bushels in 1946.
2. Rorty-six per cent bigger than last year's crop.
3. Twenty-five per cent larger than average.

Wheat Estimates Also Up

But that isn't all. The board raised its estimates for this year's wheat crop to 1,284,323,000 bushels; only 80 million bushels less that last year's all-time record.

It predicted the third largest crop of oats on record, or 1470 million bushels—just slightly below the harvests of 1945 and 1946.

It predicted a record-breaking crop of rice.

It predicted the second largest flaxseed crop in history.

It predicted an all-time record crop of soybeans, and an all-time record crop of peanuts, two of the Nation's chief vegetable oil crops.

It predicted the second largest crop of sorghum grain.

Virtually every listed crop, with the exception of tobacco, buckwheat, peas, and sweet potatoes, are promising larger returns than a year ago.

Tobacco Prospects Down

Tobacco prospects are for 1777 million pounds; last year's crop was 2107 million.

"The Maryland crop," the report said, "is reported making fair progress with production indicated at 37.6 million pounds. This is about 2 per cent below 1947 due to a slight reduction in acreage."

Potatoes are keeping up their extraordinary yields. Because of better seed, insecticides, and fertilizer, a crop of 399 million bushels is predicted against 384 last year. The increase, on less acreage, is due to larger yield per acre; or 189 bushels per acre compared with 182 a year ago, and 139 bushels from 1937 to 1946.

"The aggregate volume of all crops," the board stated, "as estimated on August 1, promises to surpass any year of record by a considerable margin."

July Egg Production

Farm flocks laid 4,459,000,000 eggs in July, the report said. This was only 1 per cent less than in July last year in spite of the fact that hen numbers are 4 per cent less.

Crops nearby Washington were listed as follows:

CORN—Maryland: 16,590,000 bushels; last year 16,416,000. Virginia: 45,068,000 bushels; last year 42,950,000. West Virginia: 12,750,000 bushels; last year 15,546,000.

WHEAT—Maryland: 5,968,000 bushels; last year, 7,770,000. Virginia, 9,633,000 bushels; last year, 8,522,000. West Virginia, 1,784,000 bushels; last year, 1,763,000.

OATS—Maryland, 1,280,000 bushels; last year, 1,216,000; Virginia, 5,005,000 bushels; last year, 3,456,00. West Virginia, 1,809,000 bushels; last year, 1,910,000.

BARLEY—Maryland, 2,387,000 bushels; last year, 2,618,000. Virginia, 3,416,000 bushels; last year, 2,478,000. West Virginia, 320,000 bushels; last year, 236,000.

Big Grain Harvest Due to Cut Pork Prices Soon, Beef Later

pork chop than there is supply to meet our meat appetite.

We are paying now for the excessive slaughter of meat animals chiefly during the postwar period But we have reached the point where, thanks to the great 1948 crops, we can start to rebuild the herds and flocks and to increase production to meet the great demand. And when that point has been reached, as it has, consumers can look for steady, if not rapid improvement in food supplies and ultimately lower prices.

The price of wheat has declined steadily since prospects for a tremendous crop have developed, month by month, into certainty. Three dollar wheat is a thing of the past and only the Government support price is holding it where it is today at about $2.25 per bushel. Farmers can obtain Government loans on wheat of $2.24 per bushel.

The high point for wheat was $3.20½ in November last year. It has dropped nearly $1 a bushel since that time.

Corn is off $1.05 a bushel since that high point of $2.70 in January, 1948, and futures for September and December corn are now quoted at $1.61½ and $1.45 per bushel, which is expected to be the Government support price range.

The price of oats and soybeans (used largely for vegetable oil) is down proportionately. Lard prices are also tumbling as news of the big cotton crop insures a large supply of cottonseed oil. This will affect the food picture, for fats and oil are of great importance.

Experience indicates that when basic commodity prices go down, consumer prices must decline. Sooner or later that will happen to food prices, although scarcity of supply, for a time, will keep some important items at present levels or even higher, until production catches up. And that is what this great crop will do—it will provide the priceless feed to produce more meat, more butter, more eggs, more poultry.

Cheaper Beef Due in Year

When can the housewife look for cheaper beef?

The best authorities say—not much cheaper until autumn, 1949.

The beef story is simple.

The high point of cattle, in numbers, on American farms was January 1, 1945, when they were estimated at 85,600,000 head. Of this total, beef cattle were 44,724,000. It was estimated on January 1, 1948, that this number had declined by 3½ million to 41.2 million. Since 1945, this country has been on a beef eating spree that has taken animals off the farm faster than they could be produced. Today the total number of dairy cattle is estimated at 3,500,000 head less than the 1945 high point. Together it is estimated there are more than seven million less cattle on the farms today than in 1945.

You can't eat your sirloins and have them too. But Joe and Mary Doakes have had the money to buy sirloins and demanded them. So prices have gone up, farmers have sold cattle they would have ordinarily kept for heavier weight, and the numbers of cattle on the farms and ranches have steadily gone down. They were faced with high costs of feed, owing to the small corn crop last year, and high labor costs and the temptation to sell was very great.

But the farmers were smart about their selling of beef cattle. They sold calves and steers and, to the best of their ability, hung on to their cows. The result today is that the proportion of breeding cows is high—at least 15,500,000 head—and with an abundance of feed assured, the business of increasing the size of herds will get under way.

Beef animals are not produced over night. It takes nearly three years to produce a heavy steer.

But there will be more beef available to the American consuming public by January 1, 1949—four months from now—because farmers will start feeding this wonderful corn crop to their stock by October 1. The cattle coming to market next spring and fall will be heavier and more of them will be finished on grain. So there will be 10 per cent more beef available, even if there are not more in point of numbers of animals.

The price may not go down immediately because the demand will still be great. But the experts feel that the turning point has been reached. Cattle raisers have culled their herds, dairymen have sold off the nonproducers, and, with plentiful feed, are looking forward to increasing herds and producing heavier animals.

Beef Buyers May Balk

It would be pleasant to be able to say that beef prices are going down immediately, but, from the standpoint of the housewife trudging around a food store with her basket and seeing steaks and roasts priced like crown jewels, there should be some little satisfaction to know that this situation is not going to be true forever. The corn crop this year is so big that, even if the 1949 crop is a disappointment, there should be a carryover big enough to continue the feeding program well into next year.

Consumer resistance or changes in buying power due to lower employment could affect prices. Food prices are subject to the same broad influences which affect the general price level.

The pork picture, from a price standpoint, is brighter because the effect of the big corn crop will come sooner.

Right now, farmers here in the Midwest are scraping out their corn cribs and feeding the remainder of last year's crops to their spring pigs. They don't have to hoard that dwindling supply any longer. A drive from Chicago to Des Moines, the center of the corn-hog belt, proves that. Packing house executives have surveyed the situation and say that spring pigs will come into the market this fall heavier and in sufficient numbers, they think, to cause more than a seasonal drop in pork prices.

Hog Population on Rise

The great corn crop has caused farmers to up their farrowing plans this fall. The hog population is going up. The increase is estimated conservatively at 5 per cent. By May 1 these pigs will be heavier than the 1947 marketing figures and so there will be more pork. Everyone agrees that the number of hogs on farms will be increased by January 1, 1949, over the same date last year.

The other day a consignment of choice hogs was sold here in Chicago for the all time record high price, $31.50 per hundred pounds. This price may be exceeded between now and October 1, but from that time on it is predicted that pork prices will go down.

The story on mutton and lamb is a sour note in the price and supply picture any way you look at it. There are less sheep on American farms today than anytime since 1865. This is almost unbelievable but the statisticians have the curves all mapped out and there it is—fewer sheep in this great agricultural country today than anytime since the Civil War.

From the standpoint of the lover of succulent lamb chops and crown roasts it is a depressing picture.

Shepherds' Pay a Factor

It seems that on the western ranges the cost of labor has discouraged the big producers. A sheep herder used to get $30 per month and now he gets from $100 to $150 per month. On smaller farms, sheep pastures have been put into more profitable grain. The only decline in lamb prices will be the seasonal marketing slumps and this year that factor will be less than usual.

Authorities here feel that the only way the sheep population is going to be increased is when the grain acreage is decreased and turned back to grass. Then farmers may resume the practice of having a small flock of sheep. They are badly needed. Somehow American farmers don't seem to like sheep raising, despite the fact that lambs hit a new high of $31.75 per hundred pounds here in Chicago this summer and wool was 49.5 cents per pound. Canadian sheep and lambs will be a new and helpful factor this fall, but not a large one. Altogether, there are only 30,544,000 head of sheep on American farms today.

Spending at Same Ratio

One comforting fact about the meat price situation is that even today this country is not spending a greater proportion of its income for this commodity than it has in the past. The American family today is spending 6.2 per cent for meat, and statistics show that we have been doing this for 30 years, with the exception of the price control period of the war years, when this figure went down to 4.7 per cent in 1944.

But the important point is that today American farmers have got a record-breaking corn crop to feed to livestock at a price ratio that makes it profitable to produce more meat. Unless some new factor is introduced to disturb the present picture, meat prices will go down in the foreseeable future.

(Tomorrow Mr. Meyer and Mr. Jones will report from Minneapolis on what the enormous wheat crop will mean to this country and to the world.)

A.T.&T. Union To Ask Raise

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—The executive board of the American Union of Telephone Workers (CIO) voted today to demand a wage increase for 25,000 employes of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

A union spokesman said it would notify the company's long lines department that it wanted the wage issue reopened as of Monday, August 16.

Since either party has 30 days in which to comply under the contract, the spokesman said, actual wage talks could be expected to begin about September 16.

"The CIO feels a wage pattern has been set" by the "mass industries," such as steel, auto, and electrical, the spokesman said.

He said reports of the United States Department of Labor indicate a wage increase pattern has been set at 12½ cents an hour.

12 More Arrested for Delay In Getting Auto Title Papers

Twelve more persons were arrested by police yesterday on charges of failing to apply for title certificates for their autos within five days after purchase.

By 3 p. m., the total number of persons arrested on this charge since Monday morning had reached 32. The arrests were made at the request of Traffic Director George Keneipp, who had warned car owners that he would ask prosecution of the offense starting on Monday, August 10.

Of the 12 persons charged yesterday, only one decided to appear in court to answer the charge. He was Longino Angel Gelabert of 1601 R st. nw.

The other 11, who elected to forfeit $5 each, were: Edward Dandrige, 2015 15th st. nw.; Estelle Julia Claggette, 1221 Maryland ave. ne.; Eugene Crosby, 38½ Decatur st. ne.; Donald T. Rodgers, 4121 4th st. nw.; Alexander M. Jones, 117 W st. nw.; Melvin J. Fletcher, 2728 Minnesota ave. se.; Grady Pitts, 1316 T st. nw.; William S. Proctor, 5350 Oxon Hill rd. se.; Willmore T. Of the 20 charged Monday, 19 elected to forfeit collateral. The 20th, Thurmond G. Hager, of 1619 A st. ne., forfeited $5 collateral yesterday when he failed to appear in Municipal Court to answer the charge.

'Meat Privateers' Assailed; Housewives' Boycott Urged

The Washington Committee for Consumer Protection last night agreed to petition the White House for a gkovernmental investigation of the meat industry.

Charging meat packers and the Eightieth Congress with failure "to take any action to protect the consumer against meat privateers," the committee summoned Washington housewives to support a "spontaneous boycott of meat."

Mrs. Frances Klafter, chairman of the committee, said last night at least eight other organizations will suport the stand taken at a meeting last night.

Mrs. Klafter said petitions for signatures will be placed in Washington shopping centers on Thursday and Friday of next week. They will be forwarded to the White House.

Other points in the program ask for rollback of prices and return to price control, plus rationing "if necessary."

The chairman listed cooperating organizations as the Potomac Co-op Federation; District of Columbia Civic Federation; Pastry Cooks and Kitchen Employes, Local 209 (AFL); Women's Auxiliary of United Public Workers of America (CIO); League of Women Shoppers; Emma Lazarus Division, Jewish People's Fraternal Order; Washington Industrial Union Council (CIO), and the Progressive Party of the District of Columbia.

Dallas Housewives Report Gains in Drive

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Rebelling housewives reconnoitered along the butcher shop skirmish line today and reported success in their revolt against high meat prices.

They reported to their general, Mrs. R. D. Vaughn, 71, that the meat counters had virtually no business and that many butchers admitted it.

From supreme headquarters in her home, Mrs. Vaughn said she had received reports from 20 stores in all parts of the city.

"The reports indicate that our slogan, 'stop buying meat for one week,' is being heeded by the housewives of Dallas."

Mrs. Vaughn finally heeded her doctor's advice today and went to bed because of a sore throat caused by her telephone campaign.

Meanwhile, a spot check of butchers showed some variance of reports. One butcher said:

"They're buying more poultry and fish," he said, "but still I am doing about as much business as usual."

Meat-Packing Plant Picketed by Women

San Francisco, Aug. 10 (AP).—Some 25 to 30 women, some with their children, picketed a big meat packing plant here today, in pursuit of lower prices. "Our beef is beef," said one placard. Another read "Meat trusts are keeping prices up—they get the gravy; we get the gristle."

Wheaton Project Rezoned Despite Refusal Of Developers to Donate Land for School

Montgomery County Commissioners yesterday approved an application by Viers Mill Village Inc., developers, to rezone an area in Viers Mill Village from residential to commercial.

The commissioners favored the application by 3-1 despite refusal of the corporation to donate land to be used as a school site.

County Commission President Brooke Johns had been attempting to conclude a deal whereby the corporation would donate the site in return for favorable action on the rezoning plea. Johns' was the lone vote opposing passage of the application.

The matter fomented a clash with Johns and County Commissioner Wesley I. Sauter criticizing James W. Gill for representing, as an attorney, the Viers Mill Village Corp., while he was a member of the school board.

Gill said he saw no inconsistency in the relationship. "I am personally very much opposed to the county commissioners selling zoning by forcing a few individual developers to donate land to the county to get zoning," he declared.

Johns saw the question differently. "I think the taxpayers are being held up if the $20,000 site is purchased when Viers Mill Village should have donated the land," he said.

County Supervisor I. G. McNayr said the site would cost $2,000 an acre, while Johns declared the 10-acre site is valued at $100 an acre in the county tax books.

The proposed site, situated adjacent to the 1400-home Viers Mill Village project near Wheaton, Md., is owned by Dr. J. Garrett Reilly. Johns had charged that Gill, acting as a school board member, had helped authorize purchase of the site.

Nursing Homes to Get Tighter Supervision

Plans to assign a full-time nurse to inspect and supervise all nursing homes in Montgomery County were disclosed yesterday after charges of "inadequate care" were hurled at one such home.

The charges were aimed at a public hearing of Mrs. Jessie M. Jolliffe who is seeking a permit from Montgomery County Commissioners to operate a nursing home at Commonwealth Farm near Colesville.

The charges, made by two persons, however, were contradicted by at least seven others who told the commissioners Mrs. Jolliffe had operated a former nursing home in satisfactory manner.

One of these was Gilbert L. Hall, president of Arlington Hospital, who said Mrs. Jolliffe's patients at the former home had received "very excellent care."

The commissioners deferred action, pending required approval of the proposed nursing home by fire, health and zoning authorities. Commission President Brooke Johns said he understood the building lacks adequate fire escapes.

Mrs. Clarence J. Clements, 9418 Wire ave., Silver Spring, charged her mother had not received adequate care at Mrs. Jolliffe's former home, and Robert T. Snure, 11030 Old Bladensburg rd., Silver Spring, said he once visited a patient there who appeared to be suffering from inadequate diet. The discussion brought from County Supervisor I. G. McNayr assurance of tighter supervision of all such nursing homes.

Attorney Withdraws Textbook Charges

Montgomery County officials yesterday ended their brief investigation into Frank T. Miles' charges that the county's school books contain Communist propaganda.

Miles, a Chevy Chase attorney, withdrew charges against two of the textbooks, they said, and school officials themselves plan to look into charges about a third book.

County Heads Give Highway Contract Rules

Regulations for construction of roads and their acceptance by the county were announced yesterday by Prince Georges County Commissioners, meeting in Upper Marlboro.

The new rules require that a permit must be obtained from the county engineer before any road is improved and that roads must meet specifications set up by the commissioners before they can be accepted as public ways for maintenance by the county.

The fee for permits will be $2 for projects costing less than $100. For those costing more 2 per cent of the estimated cost must be paid at the time of the application, the fee to be adjusted to actual cost after completion.

The ordinance provides for inspection by the county engineer before the road can be accepted.

Copies of the ordinance and specifications may be obtained from the office of County Engineer Arthur Tayman in the County Service Building, Hyattsville, or in the courthouse at Upper Marlboro.

At a public hearing yesterday, residents of Bradbury Heights Special Improvement District 29 failed to agree on a proposed survey for construction of streets, curbs and gutters and a storm drainage system in their community. The disagreement resulted in failure of the commissioners to approve the money.

Released-Time Classes Voted In Arlington

Arlington County School Board last night voted to continue the practice of releasing pupils from classes to attend noncompulsory nonsectarian classes in religious education.

Continuance of the plan was approved unanimously after the board heard a ruling from Virginia Attorney General Lindsay Almond jr., to the effect that such classes would be constitutional provided they are conducted away from the control of the public schools.

The Arlington practice will be to release from classes elementary school pupils whose parents present written requests for them to attend religious courses taught by instructors who are not employed by the school board. School property must not be used and no public funds

Written Request Is New

The only change from the Arlington practice in the past is the requirement of parents' written request.

The status of the religious classes had been in question since the Supreme Court ruled against religious courses taught in public schools. The Arlington classes taught by a private religious education council have been held away from the schools.

The school board, at last night's meeting, announced reassignment of two veteran teachers, whose failure to be returned to their jobs brought protests from a number of county parents several months ago. They are Mrs. Frances Bell, former assistant principal at Washington-Lee High School, who has been made head of the language department at the school, and Miss Gertrude Smith, primary supervisor since 1924, who this year will be administrative assistant to the school superintendent.

Mrs. Finlay Approved

The board also approved appointment of Mrs. Helen K. Finlay to succeed Mrs. Bell as assistant principal at Washington-Lee High School. Miss Smith's successor, Miss Anne Harrison, had been announced previously.

In other actions, the board established nonresident tuition rates of $140 yearly for junior high schools and $100 for elementary schools, but failed to set a rate for high schools because existing facilities are too crowded to allow nonresident pupils. September 7 was set as the date for registration for new pupils.

Cadillac
PREFERENCE
That Cadillac should long since have been preferred above all other motor cars is only natural—for only Cadillac has devoted itself exclusively to fine car production for more than 45 years.
But the preference for today's great new line of Cadillacs is extraordinary—even for Cadillac. Literally thousands who have previously been content with lesser cars are deciding to end all compromise and own "the Standard of the World."
Two things are largely responsible for this remarkable upsurge in Cadillac's popularity. First is the car's unique and original beauty—and, second, is its incomparably finer performance. Truly, here is the car of cars—any way you look at it.

Transfer of Guard To Army Advocated

By The Associated Press

Congress should take the National Guard away from the States and give it to the Army so it can get into action more quickly, a Defense Department Committee said yesterday. It proposed to combine the Guard with the Army's organized reserves and the Air National Guard with the Air Reserve of the Air Force.

And it suggested that the States, in losing control of the Guard units, be allowed to organize local military units for internal security, trained and equipped by the armed forces.

All this was dumped into the lap of Defense Secretary Forrestal by the so-called Gray Board. Forrestal said it would be looked over by the Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force before any recommendation is made to Congress.

Made Nine-Month Study

The committee took note of what it called two obstacles to quick mobilization of the Guard:

1. Inability of the Government to use the Guard for Federal purposes until Congress formally declares a national emergency.

2. Time-consuming retransfer of property and equipment from the States to the Federal Government.

Speed Element Lacking

Applying the test of national security, the committee agreed unanimously that:

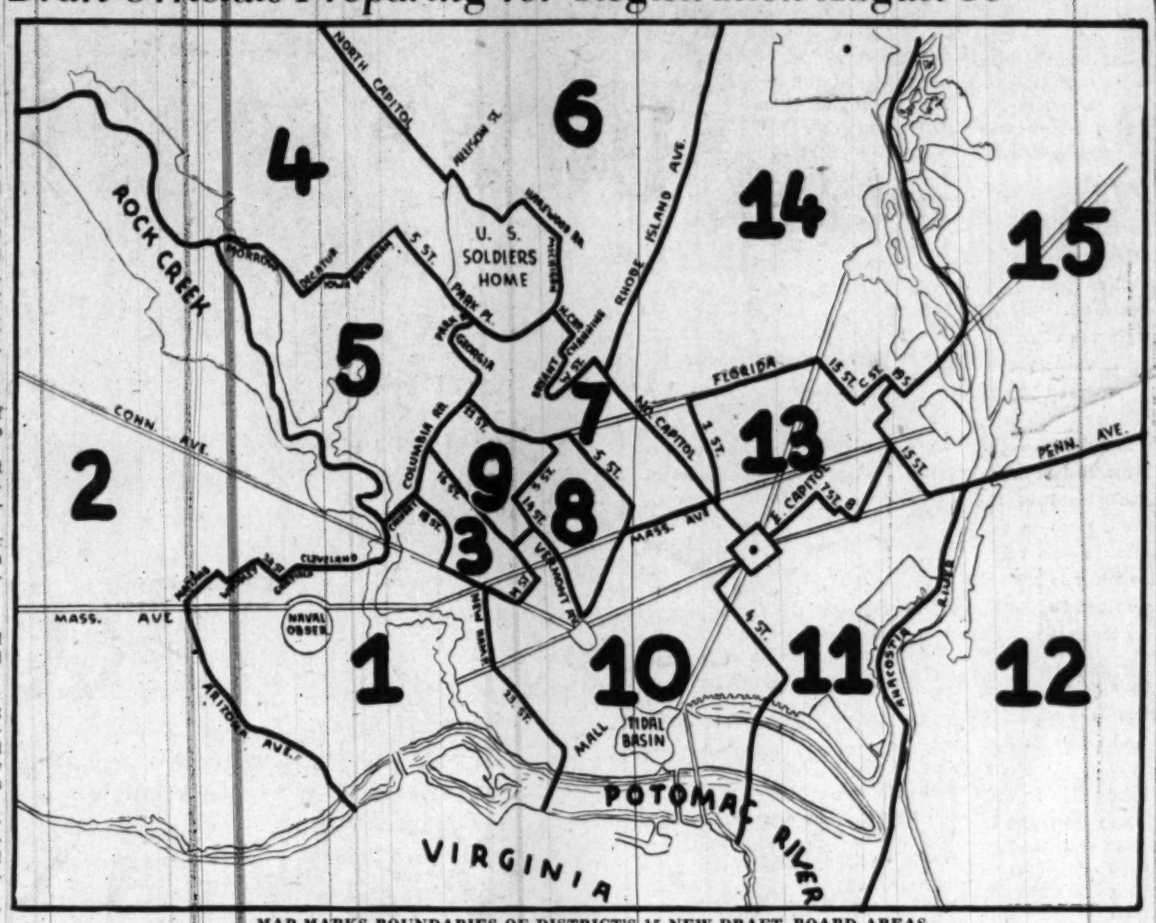
1. The Guard and reserves "are not now capable of participating effectively in major combat operation on M-day." It also said the Air National Guard as now constituted is unsuitable for its peacetime mission.

2. The National Guard would remain a part of the Nation's striking force, and other units should be organized under State control to meet local needs.

3. The Guard must be directly under Federal control to combine authority with responsibility and to emphasize the Federal Government's obligation in the organization, training and supply of the Guard.

4. The Guard exceeds the peacetime military requirement of the States and its combat organizations and powerful armament is not suitable for State missions, involving riot or other civil uprisings.

Draft Officials Preparing for Registration August 30



MAP MARKS BOUNDARIES OF DISTRICT'S 15 NEW DRAFT BOARD AREAS

Norton, director of the D. C. Office of Selective Service Records, said. Many former board members have moved from the part of the city where they served during the war.

The majority of the peacetime board members, Norton said, are veterans of World War II draft experience.

At least two of the appointees, A. J. Driscoll and James A. Gallagher, are veterans of World War I board service. Driscoll, a member of the Board of Public Welfare, has been renamed to Board No. 2, whose chairman he was in World War I, as well as World War II.

Gallagher, a salesman for Anheuser-Busch, was a World War I board member in St. Louis. He will serve on Appeal Panel No. 2.

OSSR Director Norton, whose appointment as Leahy's first assistant is expected soon, said he hoped the board would be ready for action "at least a couple of days before" opening registration, August 30. Next step by the boards, he said, is election of chairmen and secretaries.

The District draft machinery will oversee induction of an estimated 25,000 to 30,000 Washington men, probably beginning in November. Some 50,000 are expected to register from August 30 through September 18, with 55 to 65 per cent likely to be deferred, according to Norton.

Draft Blanks To Be Mailed September 1

Selective Service officials yesterday made public the eight-page questionnaire which an estimated 9,600,000 draft registrants will receive from their local boards on or before September 7.

At the same time, they announced details of induction machinery which could place the peacetime draftees in uniform some time between October 20 and November 1. Men 19 through 25 will be drafted for 21-month hitches.

A possible timetable, offered as an example, would be: Registration, August 30; questionnaire mailed, September 1; questionnaire returned within 10 days, September 11; classification by local board, September 14; examination by military doctors, September 24; notice of acceptability to the draftee, September 29; induction order, mailed October 9; actual induction, October 20.

Registrants must answer the roughly 100 questions on the document and return it to their local boards within 10 days.

The questions are designed to search out every bit of information about occupation, previous military service, dependents, conscientious objections, educational status, etc., which might provide a ground for exemption or deferment.

There is no question designed to earmark Communists. Draft officials have said they have no intention of trying to grant a blanket draft exemption to Communists.

There is a question on race, which may touch off a renewed fight on segregation and racial discrimination in the armed forces.

Big, black type on the face of the questionnaire warns registrants that they can land in jail for a long stay if they give false answers.

The maximum sentence is five years imprisonment and $10,000 fine.

Pastors Score Call for Day Of Mourning

Paris, Aug. 10 (AP)—A group of American pastors denounced as "unbiblical, unpatriotic and un-American" today the recent call by a group of United States clergymen for a day of mourning to protest the American draft law.

The pastors said the clergymen should be investigated by the House Un-American Activities Committee.

The pastors made a statement at Orly Airport during a brief stop on their way to Amsterdam, Holland, to attend the world assembly of the International Council of Christian Churches, August 11-19.

The statement said, in part:

"The call for a day of 'mourning and repentance' issued by 100 preachers against the United States draft law, naming it 'a dangerous and iniquitous measure,' merits the opposition of all who love America.

"The call is made by known pacifist preachers whose activities in the past have militated against the defense of our land. The position taken is unbiblical, unpatriotic, un-American, contrary to the historic Christian faith, and would leave America helpless before Communist expansion and encourage Russia to overrun other lands.

Berry and Lusby, Veteran D. C. Employes, Retire Aug. 1

Two veteran District Government employes with more than 35 years of service between them will retire August 31, the Commissioners announced yesterday.

They are Deputy Fire Chief Frank G. Berry, 62, and Chief Disbursing Officer James R. Lusby, 71. To succeed Lusby, the Commissioners named John J. Krohr, 44, now principal deputy disbursing officer.

Chief Berry, whose 42 years and 9 months of service is longer than that of any other member of the department, will retire because of physical disability incurred in the line of duty. He will receive a $287 monthly pension. His retirement was approved by the Commissioners upon recommendation of the Police and Firemen's Retiring and Relief Board.

The retiring fire-eater, described by Chief Clement Murphy as one of the department's "old wheelhorses," has been on sick leave for five weeks at his Cedarhurst, Md., cottage. Over the years which saw him rise from a private to No. 2 man in the department, he won several commendations and was injured many times in fires throughout the District.

Chief Berry testified in defense of Murphy when the latter was brought before a civilian board last January on charges of intoxication while fighting a three-alarm fire. The deputy chief denied Chief Murphy had been intoxicated.

Chief Disbursing Officer Lusby, a native Washingtonian, went to work as a clerk in the disbursing office in 1908. Appointed its head in 1917, he will round out "nearly 43 years' District service on August 31.

Major Lusby (his title is the result of National Guard duty) plans to take life easy at his home, 3232 Military rd. nw.

"I've never found any place where I'm as comforable as I am right here," he said yesterday at home.

His succesor, John J. Krohr, he praises as "efficient and likable—the most popular man in the District Building." Krohr, who lives at 2205 Evarts st. ne., has been in the disbursing office more than 25 years. He will draw $5905 a year.

Helping Our Own

Things seem to be looking up for the Community Chest campaign which will begin in Washington October 7. Workers in the Chest movement report a more sympathetic attitude and a broader understanding of community welfare problems among the business establishments. In part the new attitude undoubtedly stems from the wholesale housecleaning and consolidation that has gone on within the Community Chest superstructure. The Washington Community Chest and the Council of Social Agencies have been superseded by the United Community Services of Washington, a new body designed to synthesize the two. It will be the Washington constituent of the Community Chest Federation. The United Community Services will afford a broad base of representation not only to Chest-supported agencies, but also to private relief agencies and public welfare agencies as well as community organizations such as service clubs. A lay board will complement the professional staff. Thus the groundwork has been laid for tapping the community life of Washington at its roots.

But more than a streamlined organization will be needed if the city is to meet its heavier obligations this year. To mention just one area, hospital rates for care of persons dependent on Chest support have risen from $7.50 to $11 daily. Rising costs will be faced in many other Chest activities. If they are to be met adequately, the coming campaign must become a matter of personal concern to every Washingtonian, whether he is a businessman or a Government employe maintaining a residence elsewhere. The job of the Chest workers is to convince these people why they have a vital interest in the success of the campaign. Now is none too soon for Washingtonians to start budgeting for this prime mutual responsibility—to show that Washington is everybody's responsibility as well as everybody's city.

Featherbedding

A local of the Plasterers and Cement Finishers Union in Los Angeles has agreed to reimburse an employer in that city for wages paid to four men who did not actually perform any work. The agreement, probably unique in the annals of employer-employe relations, is a testimonial to the effectiveness of the Taft-Hartley ban on featherbedding. The act specifically forbids a labor organization "to cause or attempt to cause an employer to pay or deliver or agree to pay or deliver any money or other thing of value in the nature of an exaction, for services which are not performed or not to be performed."

In the Los Angeles case, the union's agreement to reimburse the employer was reinforced by a National Labor Relations Board order providing for an enforcement decree by the appropriate United States Circuit Court of Appeals. The NLRB did not indicate whether it would have directed this remedy in the absence of an agreement on the part of the union. It seems rational to conclude, however, that the union would never have entered into the agreement if the Taft-Hartley Act had not clearly required it and that the NLRB will be obliged to compel similar reimbursements in like circumstances whether or not they are voluntarily proffered.

Perhaps, then, the NLRB will succeed in putting a stop to the very prevalent practice of featherbedding. If so, it will have checked a most disturbing symptom. But it will not have done anything to cure the disease responsible for that symptom. Featherbedding is merely a technique—a stupid and wasteful technique—resorted to, largely by old-line craft unions, to offset the unemployment occasioned by technological advances. It is natural for men to resist the sort of increase in efficiency which throws them out of their jobs. They argue, and with much merit, that the benefits accruing to employers in the form of heightened profits from new machines or improved processes ought to be shared with workers—especially with those workers whom the improvements displace.

Insistence that the workers be retained in their jobs when there is no longer work for them to perform is, of course, a senselessly stubborn approach to the problem. The problem will remain, however, until some better provision can be made for those displaced. What is needed, obviously, is more adequate unemployment compensation, better facilities for retraining workers and more efficient efforts to find new jobs for them. The task is so great a one that only the Federal Government can undertake it. Sensible employers will be glad to contribute through taxation to remedying unemployment resulting from technological progress of which they are the beneficiaries.

Confidential Files

Courage is the middle name for Harry Truman in the matter of his refusal to let Senator Ferguson's committee have access to confidential files on personnel. For the President is on dubious grounds of constitutionality. The question is a thorny one, and we recall a similar argument that Mr. Roosevelt had with the Ellison Smith committee, when we thought that the President had law on his side. This is what all Presidents since George Washington have assumed. But Mr. Roosevelt, much to our disgust, caved in, his private reason being that the squabble was too minor to pursue. Since this incident we have studied a learned statement on standards for congressional investigations by Judge Charles E. Wyzanski, jr., and are persuaded that a strict interpretation of the Constitution is against the President. Judge Wyzanski concludes that there is scarcely anything in the shape of a state secret or official information beyond congressional reach. "Where the secret is known only to the President and his Cabinet or (as in the case of Mr. Grew's diary) to one of his Ambassadors," says Judge Wyzanski, "it is arguable that the privilege belongs to the Executive, and can be released only by the President, or with his consent"; but, beyond this narrow confine, Judge Wyzanski doubts the presidential withholding power.

At the same time the spirit of the Constitution, surely, is entirely in Mr. Truman's favor. Think for a moment of the effect on the lives of the affected persons and the conduct of Government of the broadcasting of the particular kind of information that Senator Ferguson is seeking. He wants the confidential file on a Commerce Department employe. This would contain reports of all the investigation agencies, including the FBI and the Loyalty Board. Now the former does not evaluate the data it collects. It gives gossip, malicious as well as friendly, and, in fact, any oddment that the investigator happens to pick up. How unfair, how grossly unfair, to circulate this material! President Monroe refused to comply with a congressional request for documents relating to the conduct of certain naval officers on the ground that to do so might subject the individuals involved to unjust criticism. Senator Ferguson might insist that the data would be held confidential. The fact remains that, as is obvious in the present hearings, there is little reticence, and even in the most soberly conducted hearing, leaks are inevitably associated with congressional committees.

Aside from this argument against disclosure, there is the argument of national defense. It is obvious that the FBI would be disturbed over the disclosure of the agency's sources of information, and rightly. As Justice Jackson said, when he was Attorney General, any handing over of confidential data would be "of aid and comfort to the very subversive elements against which you wish to protect the country." Name your sources, and you would soon find them stopped up. Senator Ferguson, who hints at impeachment in the case of such presidential refusals, would come to the same conclusion, we are convinced, if he were Attorney General, and this is the office for which he is reputed to be Mr. Dewey's choice. In that event, assuming a Republican victory, it is a safe bet that he would take the same position as all other Attorneys General have taken since the beginning of the Republic.

The problem has become acute since the conflict arose between Executive and Legislature as the result of the Republican organization of Congress. In such cases there is a tendency to blur the unwritten law governing the relations between the White House and Congress. They are coequal in the eyes of the Constitution. Thus, as in personal relations, their relations are mainly in what a great jurist philosopher called "the area of the unenforceable." Courtesy, mutual consideration and respect, and form—these rule personal relations much more than law. When they are ignored, then you have anarchy, and we suggest that Senator Ferguson is virtually counseling a sort of anarchy in pressing his point in the matter of confidential papers. The working of a system of separation of powers requires the recognition by both the Executive and the Legislature of each other's privileges. Mr. Truman in this matter is much more courageous than Mr. Roosevelt was, and in our opinion is acting in the public interest, as well as out of regard for the proprieties, in turning Senator Ferguson down flat. If the President is impeachable, in other words, the cause is good and upright.

Self-Incrimination

The succession of witnesses before the House Committee on Un-American Activities who have used the protection of the Fifth Amendment to avoid answering questions are obviously escaping self-incrimination only in the narrow, legal sense of the term. They can scarcely suppose that their refusal to answer saves them from self-incrimination in the minds of those who hear or read their testimony. For when a man declines an opportunity to deny under oath specific charges which have been made against him, the public can draw no conclusion save that he is guilty.

The Fifth Amendment, to which these witnesses have turned for refuge, provides that "no person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous, crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury. . . . nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself." No indictment has been returned against the persons appearing before the Un-American Activities Committee, although it is widely presumed that the accusations concerning them recently aired here were heard by a grand jury in New York. That grand jury is still in being, although it has recessed. The fact that it has not indicted any of the persons alleged to be implicated in Miss Elizabeth T. Bentley's Washington spy rings certainly suggests that it did not deem the evidence available to it sufficient to warrant a true bill. But if additional evidence should be forthcoming from the hearings on Capitol Hill, the grand jury might decide to indict. For that matter, it might decide to indict simply on the evidence implicit in the witnesses' refusal to answer questions.

It is apparently this fear of yielding additional evidence that has prompted the witnesses to remain silent. And no doubt it is precisely for the purpose of coercing additional evidence from them that the Un-American Activities Committee has subpenaed them. In this sense, the committee is, as we observed in earlier comment, usurping the function of the grand jury. And it is utilizing the pressure of publicity to force admissions which the Constitution specifically authorizes accused persons to withhold. If the witnesses have forfeited all claim to public sympathy by their unwillingness or inability to answer accusations against them, the committee for its part has done nothing to enhance respect for the judicial process. The other day we called its procedure "a form of lynch rule." Lynching is odious no matter what the guilt of its victims.

Canadian Leader

Little is known this side of the border about the man who has been chosen to lead the Liberal Party of Canada in succession to Mr. Mackenzie King. He is the Minister of External Affairs, Louis St. Laurent. Lack of knowledge of him is due to the recency of his entry into politics; it was not until 1941 that Mr. St. Laurent, who hails from French-speaking Quebec, left a lucrative practice at the bar to join Mr. Mackenzie King's wartime ministry. In office he has been a conspicuous success. This is due not so much to his gifts of speech, though his bilingualism is a distinct asset in Canada, as to his quality as an administrator, and, of late, to the revelation that he has vision.

It is incumbent upon Americans to know more about Canada and its new Liberal leader and the relation of both to America. The atomic age has reinforced geography in making neighborliness a necessity to both countries. Our immediate strategical concern lies in the Arctic region which is Canada's backyard, but it is sometimes expressed in relations with Canada in a way that is perhaps more impetuous than wise. Such an attitude may be offensive even to a friend. The Canadians are natural collaborators in strategy, and the accent in negotiations must always be on collaboration. Our concern is their concern, theirs is ours; and this identity of interest, coupled with the existence of all the other ties binding the two countries, requires common activity based upon the recognition of togetherness.

When Mr. Mackenzie King retires from the Prime Ministership, the mantle will fall on Mr. St. Laurent. Mr. St. Laurent is no mere follower of Mr. Mackenzie King. As firm in his belief in free enterprise and international cooperation as Mr. Mackenzie King, he is more activist, and this is likely to be registered in a more vigorous diplomacy. Hitherto the steady voice and dialectical skill of Canada have been at the service of easement and compromise at world gatherings. From now on Canada will doubtless appear among the advocates. Mr. St. Laurent believes in that larger association of freemen which is coming increasingly to be considered as a better security than armaments and bases. He thinks of the talk of war as "blasphemy," and his speeches testify to a devotion to peace expressed by a constructive readjustment in nineteenth century ideas of sovereignty. Specifically the proposal of a North Atlantic union has in him an ardent supporter, and the urgency in Mr. St. Laurent's speeches and the loftiness of his aims in relation thereto indicate the possession of statesmanship.

What People Eat

Now we are to learn what the American people eat—not what they ought to eat. For six years the Sugar Research Foundation has been conducting such a study at Pennsylvania State College. Eating habits of 12,000 individuals have been recorded down to the last crumb—and particularly, it may be assumed, to the last grain of sugar. When the study is finished, we shall know, according to its sponsors, whether or not human beings have the natural good sense to eat what is best for them. We shall know how many calories they consume, how much protein, vitamins and minerals. We shall also know whether their self-chosen diets assure them a good level of health.

This approach should make happy those rugged table individualists who maintain that man should not be nagged about his vitamins and calories, and that people were healthier in the good old days when they ate what they pleased, and didn't have to bother about such "fads" as balanced diets. According to the "ought to eat" school, the American diet is generally deficient in citrus fruits and green vegetables, and too strong on sugar and starches. But the foundation expects its study to show that people's dietary needs vary greatly, and that it is impossible to generalize as to the amount of any one food element every person needs for optimum health. If this be true, then the diet study should give many people a fine new freedom—that of leaving on their plates all their "nice" carrots and other virtuous but unexciting foods.

Inflation Analysis

Whatever action may be taken at this session of Congress, the serious problem of inflation remains before the American people. This problem will be in the forefront of public attention for many months if not years, because it is a basic problem going to the roots of our whole economy. Changes in political responsibilty would not cause this problem to disappear, nor even alter fundamentally the general range of measures available for its treatment, although different people will necessarily disagree as to the relative effectiveness or workability of specific measures.

Nothing will cause the basic problem of inflation to disappear, except either its more effective treatment or its procession to the point where even more serious problems than inflation will result in consequence of inflation. The fact that we may go through a period of so-called "leveling off" or "balance between supply and demand" before the evils generated by inflation eventuate in deflation (depression) is little cause for comfort; any more than a faulty engine in an airplane climbing at 200 miles an hour may be disregarded because we know that even if the engine falters the plane will level off for quite a space before it falls.

The analogy cannot be carried further, because it is too late to fix the engine after the plane leaves the ground, while the most favorable time to correct inflation is while it is still here and not after the economy begins the curve that will carry it downward. The further we move along that curve, the greater the danger and the more difficult the remedies.

For these reasons I am deeply concerned, not so much that particular remedies of a controversial character have not thus far been adopted, but rather because so little has been done by economists or others anywhere to attempt systematically a description of the pathology of the current inflation and to set the range of available remedies within the context of such analysis. Everyone would not agree with everything said in such an attempt, but at least it might clear up some of the bewilderment that arises from fragmentary consideration of many discrete problems without a frame of reference.

As Others See Us

Referring to the letters of "Englishman" (July 27) and "State Department Officer" (August 2) may I, speaking as another Englishman who has recently arrived in this country, offer a word of appreciation. I have found just as much courtesy and good humor amongst the people here as I have in England.

I traveled over in a United States ship in which all the officers from the captain downwards exerted themselves to make the voyage as interesting and comfortable as possible. At New York the immigration and customs officers were the essence of correctness and civility. At Washington I have found shopkeepers as obliging and helpful as any reasonable person would expect, while, in the street, a perfect stranger walked a city block with me in order to show me where to board a particular bus.

Despite the high cost of living in the United States, it is still very pleasing for an Englishman to find ample soap and towels, etc., provided in his hotel and there are still plenty of restaurants where a good meal is obtainable at a price comparable to that charged in England for a "similar," but not as good, a cover.

It is also pleasing to be able to purchase good tobacco at inexpensive prices, real ice cream, both hard and soft drinks, and, in the retail stores, large varieties of foodstuffs, including cheese and canned foods, at prices, in many cases, lower than those charged in England. Last, but not least, it is fine indeed to breathe in an atmosphere, which, to this particular Englishman at any rate, is free from the taint of "too much government," which, in his humble opinion, applies to that of England today.

I have been reading with a great deal of interest your articles on veneral disease. It's encouraging to see that the newspaper in becoming more frank, trusts the intelligence of the public on what used to be a hush-hush subject. We all can appreciate what help the articles have been to the many victims of venereal disease. The educational value of this information is, of course, invaluable.

I hope your paper continues to expose the real criminal of venereal disease—that of ignorance.

Anti-Poll Tax Bill

As was expected, the Republican leaders in the Senate surrendered to the anti-Truman Dixiecrats from the South, and dropped the antipoll tax bill and the other items in Truman's recommendations for strengthening our civil rights and enacting anti-bias legislation. The Republican leaders deliberately played into the hands of the Dixiecrats by making a motion to bring up the antipoll tax bill as the first order of business. This gave the Southerners an opportunity to debate endlessly without the possibility of being stopped by cloture, for by a curious interpretation of the Senate rules made by the Republican chairman, Senator Vandenberg, cloture to stop debate could not be applied to debate on such a motion but only debate on a pending measure.

Of course all this could have been avoided very easily merely by having the presiding officer of the Senate announce after consultation with the other members of his party that the pending business before the Senate was the antipoll tax bill. Then the Dixiecrats would have had to debate a pending measure and cloture to stop the debate could have been applied.

The Republicans needed only 42 votes to do this and they could have done it very easily with the aid of the Northern Democratic Senators who are loyal to Truman's program. But the truth is that the Republicans do not want to pass any of the civil rights measures advocated by Truman with such courage and earnestness that he has actually been willing to split his party by his stand for civil rights and for legislation against racial bias.

"Sychrava's Freedom"

In your editorial comment on my letter about the case of Dr. Lev Sychrava, "Sychrava's Freedom," you ask for answers to several questions, which my "gloating" allegedly left unanswered.

Question: Why was it necessary for Dr. Sychrava to leave, and why did he feel compelled to try to cross the border illegally?

Answer: Obviously nobody but Dr. Lev Sychrava himself can answer a question about the motives of his feelings which prompted him to try an illegal crossing of the border. In view of the fact that, after an unsuccessful attempt, he did get a passport, it might fairly be assumed that he was wrong in feeling compelled to try an unlawful way of getting out of the country. As to the "necessity" of leaving—nobody forced him to leave. He could have stayed on unharmed, as did countless other persons in a similar position.

Question: What circumstances forced his release from imprisonment?

Answer: Why should special circumstances be necessary to force Dr. Sychrava's release? Why not assume the most natural thing on earth, namely, that he was released because he was guilty but of a minor violation of passport regulations? Why disregard Premier Zapotocky's statement, briefly reported also in American papers, that "we won't prevent anybody from emigrating if he or she does not want to work for the republic; everybody might go where he longs to go." Why ignore the fact that President Gottwald, after taking office, issued a most generous amnesty for criminal and political offenders of the law, excepting only black marketeers and Nazi collaborators?

Question: Why was Dr. Sychrava conspicuously absent from the Czech delegation to the United Nations Freedom of Information Conference in Geneva after he had expressed confidence that he would attend the meeting?

Answer: Because he was not appointed a delegate by the Czechoslovak government, which had the exclusive right to decide who was to represent it at the conference. There was even the case of a journalist, who wanted to attend the Geneva conference on the freedom of the press as a newspaper correspondent and was refused a passport—and this was by no means a Czechoslovak or Eastern case.

Question: Why also did the Czechoslovak delegation protest vigorously the expression of gratitude voted Dr. Sychrava by the conference after his statement of principles had been read into the record?

Answer: Because, as you certainly know, although you prefer not to mention it in your question, the expression of gratitude was linked with an expression of regret about his absence, clearly destined to censure the Czechoslovak government.

Question: Could it be that freedom of the press in Czechoslovakia applies only to those practitioners who refrain from criticizing the party line?

Answer: The Czechoslovak concept of freedom of the press was presented in detail to the Geneva conference. It differs from your concept. Yet in sticking to old concepts, Columbus would never have discovered this country, nor could the 13 colonies have proclaimed their independence and their new Bill of Rights.

Question: Could it be also that our correspondent's letter dwelling on Dr. Sychrava's safety is an astute propaganda effort to cover up the circumstances of his departure?

Answer: There is nothing to be covered up. Please feel free to send one of your correspondents to Czechoslovakia, where he might join the dozens of Western correspondents roaming freely about and sending out their stories, critical and/or biased as they might be. Be assured that in obtaining a visa for Czechoslovakia, your correspondent will encounter not 1 per cent of the difficulties newspaper correspondents from over there have met and continue to meet, when trying to go on an assignment in the opposite direction.

Curbing Family Debt

By Malvina Lindsay

Mortgaged Futures

THE NEW legislation to put brakes back on the "buying on time" trend would have been puzzling to Grandpa who considered it a social disgrace not to pay cash for his purchases. He never dreamed of today's vast credit structure which makes it possible for families to have motor cars, refrigerators, washing machines, furniture and gadgets without waiting until the last cent of the purchase price has been put in the piggy bank.

The modern system has its advantages, as any suave salesman will speedily convince you. But it also has its pitfalls. Just now it is threatening to get out of hand again, as it did in the 1920s. Hence, there is legislative action for commodity credit controls.

Those trying to build storm cellars against what may be a "bust" or a milder "disinflation," as Geoffrey Crowther, editor of the London Economist, predicts, are starting in on the installment buyers. This has raised the cry that the little man is being squeezed, that a higher down payment is a discrimination against the young veteran or other new householder who desperately needs household equipment and hasn't the money to pay for it.

HOWEVER, those concerned about the consumer credit situation point out that collections are down, and that there is a steady increase of repossessions—the taking back of goods that cannot be paid for. Many families are reported buying beyond what they can afford, and getting into the most vulnerable of all positions in the economic sector—that of debt—to meet future deflation.

Yet the installment buying of today is vastly different in character from that preceding the 1929 crash. Then it was part of a spending splurge based on the buoyant confidence that the American economy was invincible. Stock speculation was the pursuit of the day, and many small purchasers of "time" goods confidently believed their market winnings would pay for their mortgaged radios, motor cars and gadgets.

Today much of the on-time buying is done under what is regarded as necessity. The tremendous number of war and postwar marriages has put millions of new families into the market for homes and household goods. Many other families have been urgently in need during the scarce war years of the durable goods they are now buying. And many families' needs of equipment extend back through the long lean years of the depression.

Moreover, there is a cautious and worried feeling among many who are buying beyond their means. They know they are spending at the top of a boom, yet they feel their needs are too urgent to postpone.

HIGHER wages and living standards of wartime have made self-discipline in the matter of buying on time more difficult. In the 1920s the installment buyers laughed at Grandpa's system of counting out his money for what he took home. That was old-fashioned finance, they said. The modern way was to "exercise your credit." But today's installment buyers don't think about the intricacies of finance, but rather of the necessity of having the things they want in order to "live decently."

Most of those in the exposed installment front of the economy belong in the ranks of the 16 million families—one third of the Nation's spending units—who have been using up their bank accounts and bonds. A large part of these savings have gone for nondurable goods in order to meet the inflated cost of living. So when credit controls were lifted and down payments on durable goods eased, there was the temptation to buy needed conveniences and comforts that had been out of reach. And as new goods came on the market and the pinch of living increased, the "sign on the dotted line" method seemed the only way to have one's cake and eat it.

Now if the Federal Reserve Bank when it attains power to control commodity credit, restores the old Regulation W, there is likely to be curtailment in buying of electrical appliances, musical instruments, furniture and automobiles. For down payments of one fifth to one third the purchase price would be required on these goods, and paying time limited to 12 to 15 months. While this might not have a very far reaching effect on inflation, it would cause many families to forego today's comforts for a less perilous economic future.

Hoover Goes Home

Address on 74th Birthday

West Branch, Iowa, Aug. 10.—The following is the text of Herbert Hoover's homecoming address here today on the occasion of his seventy-fourth birthday.

I AM glad to have your invitation to come again to this Iowa village where I was born. Here I spent the first ten years of my boyhood. My parents and grandparents came to this village in the covered wagon—pioneers in this community. They lie buried over the hill. They broke the prairie into homes of independent living. They worshipped God; they did their duty to their neighbors. They toiled to bring to their children greater comfort, better education and to open to them wider opportunity than had been theirs.

I am proud to have been born in Iowa. As I have said before, through the eyes of a 10-year-old boy it was a place of adventure and daily discoveries. The wonder of the growing crops, the excitements of the harvest, the journeys to the woods for nuts and hunting, the joys of snowy winters, the comfort of the family fireside, of good food and tender care. And out of the excessive energy of all small boys, the evenings were filled with accounts of defeat and victory over animate and inanimate things—so far as they were permitted in a Quaker community.

Indelible in those recollections was a widowed mother, sitting with her needle, cheerfully supporting three children and at the same time ministering to her neighbors. After that came life with Uncle Allan on his farm near this village, with the joys and sorrows which come to every small boy en route to life's disciplines by way of farm chores. And among them was the unending making of provisions for the next winter. But in those primitive days, social security was had from the cellar, not from the Federal Government.

YOU may be surprised if I tell you that at an age somewhat under 10 I began here my first national service. By my own efforts I furnished firecrackers required for the adequate celebration of the Independence of the United States on July 4, 1882. To get those firecrackers, I entered into collective bargaining by which it was settled that I should receive 1 cent per hundred for picking potato bugs in a field in sight of this stand. My impression then and now is that it was an oppressive wage rate.

Also, I took part in the political issues of the day by walking beside a Garfield torchlight procession in the presidential campaign of 1884. And by the village flags at half-mast, I learned of the assassination of Garfield, with some dim understanding that somewhere in the nation great men guarded its future.

One of the indelible impressions of memory was the original Quaker Meeting House. Those recollections chiefly revolve around the stiff repression of the explosive energies of a small boy sitting during the long silences. One time, however, the silence was broken by the shrill voice of Aunt Hannah who was moved in meeting bitterly to denounce the modernistic tendencies of those times. She had firm views on any form of recreation, which included singing in Sunday school. She closed with a peroration to the effect that if these tendencies persisted that edifice dedicated to God would some day become in fact that place of abomination—a "the-atre." And truly, the old meeting house in its decadent years, having made way for a better edifice, became a movie house. My view is that the abomination part depends on the choice of the film.

And among these recollections was that of a great lady who first taught me in school and remained my friend during her whole long and useful life, Mrs. Mollie Carran.

It was from her that I first heard something about the word American. Many great writers and statesmen have attempted to express what we mean by that word. But there is an imponderable feeling within it which reaches to the soul of our people and defies measure.

AMERICA means far more than a continent bounded by two oceans. It is more than pride of military power, glory in war, or in victory. It means more than vast expanse of farms, of great factories or mines, magnificent cities, or millions of automobiles and radios. It is more even than the traditions of the great tide westward from Europe which pioneered the conquest of a continent. It is more than our literature, our music, our poetry. Other nations have these things also.

Maybe the intangible we cannot describe lies in the personal experience and the living of each of us rather than in phrases, however inspiring.

Perhaps without immodesty I can claim to have had some experience in what American means. I have lived many kinds of American life. After my early boyhood in this Iowa village, I lived as the ward of a country doctor in Oregon. I lived among those to whom hard work was the price of existence. The open opportunities of America opened out to me the public schools. They carried me to the professional training of an American university. I began by working with my own hands for my daily bread. I have tasted the despair of fruitless search for a job. I know the kindly encouragement of a humble boarding-house keeper. I know now that at that time there was an economic depression either coming or going. But nobody told me of it. So I did not have the modern worry of what the Federal Government would do about it.

I have conducted the administration of great industries with their problems of production and the well-being of their employes.

I have seen America in contrast with many nations and races. My profession took me into many foreign lands under many kinds of government. I have worked with their great spiritual leaders and their great statesmen. I have worked in governments of free men, of tyrannies, of Socialists and of Communists. I have met with princes, kings, despots and desperados.

I have seen the squalor of Asia, the frozen class barriers of Europe. I was not a tourist. I was associated in their working lives and problems. I had to deal with their social systems and their governments. And outstanding everywhere to these great masses of people there was a hallowed word—America. To them, it was the hope of the world.

MY every frequent homecoming was a reaffirmation of the glory of America. Each time my soul was washed by the relief from grinding poverty of other nations, by the greater kindliness and frankness which comes from acceptance of equality and the wide-open opportunity to all who want a chance. It is more than that. It is a land of self-respect born alone of free men.

In later years I participated on behalf of America in a great war. I saw untold misery and revolution. I have seen liberty die and tyranny rise. I have seen human slavery again on the march.

I have been repeatedly placed by my countrymen where I had need to deal with the hurricanes of social and economic destruction which have swept the world. I have seen bitter famine and the worst misery that the brutality of war can produce.

I have had every honor to which any man could aspire. There is no place on the whole earth except here in America where all the sons of man could have this chance in life.

I recount all this in order that, in Quaker terms, I can give my own testimony.

The meaning of our word America flows from one pure spring. The soul of our America is its freedom of mind and spirit in man. Here alone are the open windows through which pours the sunlight of the human spirit. Here alone is human dignity, not a dream, but an accomplishment.

Perhaps another etching of another meaning of America lies in this community. It was largely settled by Quakers over 90 years ago. This small religious sect in England had declared that certain freedoms of man came from the Creator and not from the state 150 years before the Declaration of Independence. They spent much time in British stocks and jails for this first outburst of faith in the dignity of the individual man.

THEY first came in refuge to New England. But the Puritans cut off their ears by way of disapproval of their religious individualism. Then came the great refuge which William Penn secured for them. From New England and Pennsylvania some of the ancestors of this community, before the Revolution, migrated first to Maryland, and after a generation they moved to the Piedmont of North Carolina. Then early in the last century slavery began to encroach upon them. Most of that community—5000 of them—organized a concerted trek to Ohio and Indiana. This time they were seeking freedom from that great stain on human liberty. Again after a generation they hitched their covered wagons and settled on these prairies.

Everywhere along these treks there sprang up homes and farms. But more vital was the Meeting House with its deep roots in religious faith, its tolerance and devotion to liberty of the individual. And in these people there was the will to serve their community and their country. Even this village was a station on the underground through which Negroes were aided to the freedom of Canada. Sons of this community were in the then Red Cross of the Civil War. And despite their peace loving faith, many of their sons were enrolled in the Union Army to battle for free men.

That imbedded individualism, that self-reliance, that sense of service, and above all those moral and spiritual foundations were not confined to the Quakers. They were but one atom in the mighty tide of these qualities of many larger religious bodies which make up the intangible of the word American.

AT THE time our ancestors were proclaiming that the Creator had endowed all mankind with rights of freedom as the child of God, with a free will, there was being proclaimed by Hegel and later by Karl Marx a satanic philosophy of agnosticism and that the rights of man came from the state. The greatness of America today comes from one philosophy, the despair of Europe from the other.

There are today fuzzy-minded people in our country who would compromise in these fundamental concepts. They scoff at these tested qualities in men. They never have understood and never will understand what the word America means. They explain that these qualities were good while there was a continent to conquer, and a nation to build. They say that time has passed. No doubt the land frontier has passed. But the frontiers of science are barely opening. This new land with all its high promise cannot and will not be conquered except by men inspired from the concepts of free spirit.

It is those moral and spiritual qualities in free men which fulfill the meaning of the word American. And with them will come centuries of further greatness to our country.

34 Deny Conspiracy to Fix U. S. Paint Industry's Prices

Pittsburgh, Aug. 10 (AP).—Thirty-four companies and individuals today pleaded innocent in Federal District Court to charges they conspired to fix prices in the Nation's billion-dollar paint and wood stains industries.

One indictment charges 22 defendant corporations and officials, engaged in paint manufacture. Four of those defendants are named in a second indictment relating to the wood stain industry.

Involved are 14 companies that make nearly half the Nation's paint, varnishes, stains, enamels and lacquers. Twenty officials of those firms were named in the indictments.

The case has been described by Attorney General Tom Clark at Washington as part of an antitrust program aimed at "illegal conspiracies" in housing.

One indictment listed these defendants as producers of paints, varnishes, enamels, and lacquers: Sherwin-Williams Co., Cleveland; American-Marietta Co., Chicago; Cook Paint & Varnish Co., Kansas City, Mo.; Devoe & Raynolds Co., Inc., New York; E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co., Wilmington, Del.; General Paint Corp., San Francisco; The Glidden Co., Cleveland; The interchemical Corp., New York, and the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., Pittsburgh.

The second group was described as producers of lacquers, varnishes, enamels and stains for use in the wood furniture industry. They were E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co.; American-Marietta Co.; Columbus Varnish Co.; Columbus, Ohio; Grand Rapids Varnish Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.; the Lilly Co., High Point, N. C.; the Lilly Varnish Co., Indianapolis, Ind.; Sherwin-Williams Co. and the Southern Varnish Corp., Roanoke, Va.

Molotov Wants Advance Payment

AUTHORITATVE REPORTS of the conversations now going on in Moscow clearly indicate that the Russians, who follow an unvarying pattern in dealing with their Western antagonists, have now moved into Phase Two. This has considerably watered down the optimism on the lifting of the Berlin blockade which existed a few days ago. For Phase Two of Soviet diplomacy is, of course, the tough phase.

Phase One, the conversation between Soviet Dictator Stalin and the three Western envoys, was just about what might have been expected, from the published accounts. On Monday, August 2, the Westerners, Bedell Smith of the United States, Frank Roberts of Great Britain and Yves Chataigneau of France were ushered into the rectangular Kremlin conference room ordinarily used by the 14-man Politburo. At one end of the long table the Western diplomats found Stalin, Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov and an interpreter.

Ambassador Smith, with the backing of his British and French colleagues, spoke urgently and frankly of the extremely serious view taken by the Western powers of the Berlin blockade. Stalin was affable—he is capable of an agreeable geniality. Moreover, he seemed unexpectedly reasonable. In the two hours' talk, he made no firm commitment. But the three Westerners left with the distinct impression that the blockade would soon be lifted and that Stalin was ready to negotiate without demanding advance payment in the form of prior concessions.

SMITH, ROBERTS and Chataigneau are, of course, experienced diplomats. They are wholly familiar with the usual pattern of Soviet diplomacy. Nevertheless they were encouraged by their long conversation with the Russian dictator, and the aura of optimism which surrounded them when they emerged from the Kremlin reflected this encouragement.

Immediately they went to work on drafting a report of their conversation. The report was written by all three and was dispatched in identical form (except of course that it was translated into French for Paris) to the three Western capitals. This in itself is significant, for it demonstrates how close is the alliance which Soviet policy has forced on the three Western states. At any rate, the report was cautiously but distinctly optimistic in tone. Thus ended Phase One.

Molotov took over for Phase Two — the tough phase — which started with the meeting on August 6. Ambassador Smith's terse remark on emerging from this meeting suggested its tone —"Molotov, three hours, no Stalin, no comment." For, as if to balance the affability of the dictator, Molotov was even rather grimmer than is his custom.

The Westerners began by reciting, as a basis for discussion, their understanding of the views expressed in the previous meeting by Stalin. Molotov bursquely implied that the Western version of what Stalin had said was incorrect. The blockade, he asserted, could be lifted, and a four-power conference arranged. But the Soviets, he clearly indicated, would expect an advance down payment from the West in return.

THE EXPECTED down payment inevitably concerned western Germany, and the plans agreed upon at the London three-power conference for a western German government. Molotov argued that a conference to negotiate a government for all Germany would be meaningless if the Germans, under Western auspices, were simultaneously meeting to create the framework of a government for western Germany. The implication was clear—call off the German parliamentary assembly scheduled for September as an advance payment on the lifting of the blockade.

The three Western powers have so far acted completely in concert. Yet the west German problem may lead to disagreement. The French, quite naturally, want to make Molotov's down payment, simply by delaying those features of the London agreement which they opposed in the first place. It is the French view that the choice is between postponing a west German government or evacuating Berlin. There would be certain advantages in such a postponement to the Americans and British as well, if only because a lifting of the blockade would provide an opportunity for building up the depleted stockpiles in Berlin.

Yet such a concession would look to the Germans like Western weakening. Moreover the Americans, backed less firmly by the British, have consistently taken the position that they are willing to negotiate, but that they are in Berlin by right, and will make no prior concessions to get the blockade lifted.

There matters stand at present—as this is written a third conversation is taking place in Moscow. Although, in accordance with the Soviet pattern, Molotov talked far tougher than Stalin, no doors have been slammed. At least a temporary resolution of the Berlin crisis, and a foreign ministers' conference in Paris in September, are therefore still better than even bets.

Peoples Drug Net Declines In Six Months

By S. Oliver Goodman

Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., yesterday reported net income of $626,427 for the first six months this year, equal to $1.46 a common share. This compared with net of $983,927 or $2.29 a share in the corresponding 1947 period.

Despite the sharp earnings drop, the chain whose headquarters are in Washington covered the period's 80-cent dividend requirement by an ample margin.

Principal factor in the net decline was a $443,902 increase in operating expenses. Sales of $21,977,129 were $104,033 lower than in the 1947 period. Provision for Federal income tax was $383,939, against $603,052 last year.

The corporation reported earned surplus as of June 30 was $7,632,537, compared with $6,625,329 on the same date last year. Total assets were $14,060,466, a gain of $979,875 for the 12 months ended June 30. Ratio of current assets to current liabilities was 2.70 to 1.

TIGHTENING: Treasury's increase in interest rate on short-term Government securities is expected to make money more expensive to borrow, thus tightening up one source of inflation. Sudden or drastic action by banks is not anticipated. There are many types of securities or commercial paper on which banks advance loans. In some of these classes banks believe no greater rate of interest can be charged.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Norman Finlay will be in charge of the new Washington sales division of Gerber Products Co., baby food maker . . . Marvin W. Smith has been elected executive vice president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works . . . E. Perry Holder was elected chairman of the board of American Bosch Corp., following

Finlay

Amra Corp.'s acquisition of control from Office of Alien Property . . . Benjamin T. Hain has been appointed general manufacturing manager of National Radiator Co. . . . John O. Farrell has been named assistant to general manager of Virginian Railway . . . Robert F. Carroll has joined the public relations department of Doremus & Co.

NEW BOOKLET: Carl H. Ellingson of Washington is the author of a pamphlet description of how Federal savings and loan associations operate and what they are. The booklet, published by American Savings & Loan Service of Cincinnati, points out there are now more than 1500 of such associations with assets of $5,459,640,000. The booklet is available without cost at the 13th st offices of the First Federal Savings & Loan Association, which Ellingson heads.

BULLS AND BEARS: Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath in current market letter expects earnings to level off at current peaks and "strongly recommends maintaining the major portions of all common stock commitments in high quality issues." . . . Bache & Co. has published a three-page appraisal of the air-conditioning industry including tabular comparisons of some of the leading companies. . . . W. B. Hibbs & Co., in this week's market letter, comments: "With the profit situation becoming spottier, we expect a continuance of irregular markets for some time to come. . . . Oil stocks are still attractive but would give preference to those companies with large crude reserves."

BOND HOLDINGS OFF: For the first time since the war, Government securities constitute less than 40 per cent of the resources of Maryland banks and trust companies, J. Millard Tawes, State banking commissioner said. At the same time he pointed out that loan portfolios had shown marked increases, and said that during 1947 they increased by 37 million dollars or 17.9 per cent. Government obligations held by State banking institutions were down by 44 million dollars or 10 per cent.

EARNINGS: Commercial Credit Co. reported net income of $7,789,835 for the first six months, or $4.23 a common share, compared with $2,858,556 or $1.55 a share in the same 1947 period. Other earning reports:

Mills' Perspective on Inflation: Too Much Asked for Too Little

By J. A. Livingston

FREDERICK C. MILLS is to prices what Wesley C. Mitchell is to the business cycle and Clara Bow and Lana Turner are to "it."

Mills has just finished having his say about inflation in an analysis for the National Bureau of Economic Research, "The Structure of Postwar Prices." It's formidable. But it's just the kind of perspective the country needs right now—at the onset of a political campaign.

Livingston

Since 1939, farmers and workers and most all of us have doubled and tripled our asking prices, yet we're giving mighty little more for what we're getting. That, says Mills, is inflation.

Perhaps you'd like to see it for yourself. The following table shows the increases in (a) the amount of goods produced or services rendered and (b) the value—the price charged. Note how the farmer boosted his prices 272%, output only 27%; note how manufacturers get 248% more in price for only 82% more output:

	% Increase Since '39
	Quantity	Value
Agriculture	27%	272%
Man-hours in Mfg.	70	248
Manufacturing	82	248
Retail Sales	73	206
Man-hours in Mining	34	171
Minerals	46	136
All Consumer Purchases	54	136
Construction	34	136
RR Freight (ton-miles)	118	136

OBVIOUSLY, the farmer is drawing far more from the common pot than he did in 1939, ditto the factory worker, but not so much so. The railroads have been committing the cardinal sin during inflation — delivering to shippers, to consumers, full value for their money! Freight hauled has increased with price. For which the Interstate Commerce Commission, which has to pass on rates, gets credit for an assist.

Over the long term, the factory worker is the big winner in the struggle for the United States economic pie. His real earnings have increased fairly consistently since before the First World War. On the other hand, recent advances in farm prices offset losses of the '20's and the '30's. Thus farm prices are up only 177 per cent since 1912-14 as against 468 per cent for hourly and 355 per cent for weekly wages. Owners of real estate are worst off. Rent has gone up only 26 per cent in the 34-year span, a suggestion of the perils of property. Here are the figures:

Item	Per Cent Increase 1942-14 to '48
Hourly Earnings	468%
Weekly Earnings	355
Construction Costs	303
Industrial Stock Prices	187
Farm Prices	177
Retail Food Prices	156
Prices Paid by Farmers	145
Cost of Living	138
Wholesale Prices	133
Rent	26

THE TABLE verifies what most of us know. Incomes of farmers and consumers have outstripped the cost of living. That's the statistical corroboration of the rise in the United States standard of living, of the development of indoor plumbing, the telephone and radio; the advent of the automobile, the replacement of the candle and kerosene lamp by electricity, and increased nutrition.

Mills puts Wall Street in its place. We've been in the habit of thinking that the stock market is in the economic rear, that shares on the New York Stock Exchange have lagged behind the country. But that's partly because we think in terms of years instead of generations.

To be sure, industrial stock prices have gone up only 26 per cent since 1939 as against a 100 per cent rise in wages, 200 per cent in farm prices and 70 per cent in the cost of living. Go back, however, to before the First World War and the stock market is right up in the parade. From 1912-14 to date it has gone up 187 per cent. As the table above shows, that rise is exceeded only by factory wages and construction costs. Apparently industrial stocks went up so fast and far in the gold-plated New Era days of 1928 and 1929 that they've been dehydrating ever since. And that has its good side. In this inflation, Wall Street is not a pillar of weakness.

Mills' concluding observation is worth thinking about: "Inflation or deflation does not result from the working of vast, impersonal forces for which there are no personal responsibilities. Under the conditions existing in early 1948 the roles of industrial producers and of industrial labor are strategic. If labor costs and industrial prices do not give a further fillip to the general price level, there is hope that the needed and inevitable internal readjustment of prices may be effected less painfully than it was in 1920-21.

In short: Beware the fourth round.

Interest Rate On New Loans Hiked in N. Y.

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—A general increase of ¼ of 1 per cent in the interest rate on new commercial loans was indicated today by New York banks as a result of the United States Treasury's newest drive against inflation.

The new base will be 2 per cent, replacing the present general rate of 1¾ per cent charged customers with the highest credit ratings during the past eight months.

The signal for the advance came yesterday when Secretary of the Treasury Snyder announced that the Government would pay 1¼ per cent interest on short-term Government loans in place of 1⅛ per cent.

There was no tendency among New York bankers to rush into the new higher rate or immediately to demand more money for their loans. They ascribed these reasons for the policy:

1. There still is plenty of money waiting to be loaned.

2. There is a lot of competition among banks for business with the borrower taking the best terms.

3. For some time interest rates have been firming on all classes of commercial loans.

Old customers with top credit ratings might even find they can borrow money at the old rates, bankers said, but negotiations for new loans will have to start off with the understanding that the new bottom rate is 2 per cent and not 1¾.

Secretary Snyder's action was characterized as a "straw in the wind"—a definite action to put the brakes on inflation.

The next step generally anticipated is an increase in the Federal Reserve discount rate, the rate at which banks can borrow from the Federal Reserve. That will be a sharp jerk on the brakes compared with today's more gentle tug.

As one banker explained: "Businessmen outside of the New York financial community have a great respect for the rediscount rate. An increase will be a definite signal that the easy money days are over."

Rail Issue Approved

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday authorized the Western Maryland Railway Co. to issue $5,800,000 of equipment trust certificates in connection with new equipment purchases.

be necessary to introduce more express service in the system in order to attract additional patrons."

McElfresh said his schedule would yield an additional $2,050,832 a year for CTC. This figure was based on an assumption that weekly pass sales will decline 15 per cent, but that this drop will result in a shift to cash and token fares.

John O'Dea, PUC people's counsel, asked McElfresh to prepare tables based on a 12-cent cash fare, sale of tokens at 5 for 55 cents and a $1.65 weekly pass.

Battle of Slide Rules

Cross-examination of McElfresh brought out several slide rules which were used by various experts and McElfresh in preparing and answering queries. The battle of the slide rules was interrupted sharply in the morning session when an attorney probed into the Maryland operations of the company and why the PUC did not separate the functions.

McElfresh, testifying that the nearby Free State operations of the firm lost $256,000 last year, said it would "not be practical to show the Maryland operations separately. It would require too many assumptions to make proper allocations."

Harry R. Booth, counsel for the Washington Committee for Consumer Protection, then asked McElfresh: "Are you in the habit of ignoring accounting problems that involve difficulty?"

Before McElfresh could answer, Raymond Sparks, a member of the law firm of Hewes & Awalt, legal counsel for CTC, jumped up, shouting:

"I have never seen anything like it. The counsel is deliberately slowing up the hearing."

Assistant Corporation Counsel Lloyd B. Harrison fumed: "Mr. Booth is employed in this case for the purpose of delaying this case."

Sparks' law associate, F. Gloyd Awalt, interposed: "Booth is well known for his tactics in such cases."

Booth, reddened under the attacks from both ends of the counsel table, replied angrily: "I will not let anyone ram this fare increase through the commission and make the people of the District immediately pay this rate increase. I never took a piece of litigaton for such purpose (delaying judgment) in my life. I am well known as a defender of the people."

Harrison retorted: "Not among people I know." Booth answered: "I don't know what people you know."

More Verbal Clashes

Toward the end of the day's session, more verbal fireworks were touched off when Booth asked McElfresh to compute how much added revenue his 13-cent fare schedule would provide CTC, according to last year's traffic figures.

PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan refused to permit the witness to do so, commenting: "I wouldn't permit Mr. McElfresh to make such an asinine calculation as that, so foreign to the testimony as that."

As Booth rose to object, Flanagan said: "The chairman has ruled. We won't argue about it."

Booth, however, began: "I'm sure that the chairman has broad powers of interpretation." At this point, Flanagan proposed a recess, to which Booth commented: "After that remark of yours I can stop completely."

India's First Movie Explodes Some Myths

By Sonia Stein

IT'S A good thing Hollywood did not do it. If "Shakuntala," which opens this morning at the Dupont Theater, was produced here, there would be a great hue and cry about how Hollywood had made the Indians (East, that is) seem what they are not.

After all, any fool knows that love scenes don't belong in an Indian film; that women are kept virtually under lock and key in India and wouldn't know how to flirt; that all Indians are dark-eyed.

Ha! Any fool knows these things, only they are not true. This Indian-made film, which ran 104 weeks in Bombay, is based on a poetic play written by Kalidasas 15 centuries before Shakespeare. And according to F. M. De Mello, information director for the Indian Information Services, the film takes no violent liberties with the original play, or the customs of the country.

And yet "Shakuntala" is far from the staid item you might expect. It's true that Indian actors don't kiss, but their love scenes are tender and romantic, withal discreet. The actors speak volumes with their eyes, BLUE ones as well as brown. (Our hero has very light eyes, and De Mello assures me there are light-complexioned Indians with gray or blue eyes.)

Cherubic Sharpshooter

Shakuntala, our heroine, is abandoned as a baby by her mother, a celestial nymph, and is adopted and cherished by an old and saintly hermit. One day, while hunting in the forest, the King comes upon Shakuntala and her flirtatious playmates, and decides the trip is indeed a success.

The King marries Shakuntala but fails to recognize her when she comes to the palace later, because a disgruntled old hermit has put a curse on the pair after Shakuntala unwittingly slights him.

Shakuntala bears her son in the forest and raises him to a rugged 5 or 6 years. The King, meantime, has remembered his bride and searched the length and breadth and we might say height, of the Himalayas fer her. Wandering disconsolately on a hunting trip, the King is startled by a little archer who stops the royal arrows in midflight with nicely aimed ones of his own. (Hollywood, were you ever guilty of worse?)

This child turns out to be his son, Shakuntala is reunited with her husband, and the royal family rides off happily to the jewel-encrusted palace.

In spite of the melodramatic plot, the story is played with great simplicity of style. There is considerably more gentle comedy in it than seems possible from the story—most of it provided by the chorus of flirtatious maidens who inhabit the hermitage.

Songstress of India

There is some extremely agreeable dancing and singing, of which "Indian audiences cannot get enough," according to De Mello. Jayashree, one of India's favorite actresses, sings in a clear, strong voice that resembles in quality the instruments on which the plaintive semitonal music of India is played.

Perhaps the most outstanding feature of the film is the photography—drops of water on lotus leaves, the desolate Shakuntala crumpled into a little heap of golden gown on the huge throne room floor.

The dialogue is in Hindustani, with English subtitles to clarify whatever is not made abundantly clear by Jayashree's big brown eyes.

Although this is the first Indian film to be shown in Washington, and the first feature to be released in this country since Inda's independence, there are plenty more where this came from. Indian studios are second only to Hollywood in the number of pictures they produce yearly. England and France combined do not produce as many.

Attendance at India's 2000 movie theaters is enormous, since Indian families return again and again to see a picture they have enjoyed. Six months is a good run for a picture in one theater.

"Shakuntala" is being presented this week to celebrate the first anniversary of India's independence. Any tickets for the film which are purchased through the All-India Union, 929 17th st. nw., will yield a percentage to the fund for Indian refugee children.

Jayashree, one of India's leading actresses, plays the title role in "Shakuntala," based on an Indian poetic drama almost 20 centuries old. Opening this morning at the Dupont Theater, the film helps celebrate the first anniversary of India's Independence

Bridges Kindles Legal Fire Under Ewing's Borrowed Cook

By the United Press

Chairman Styles Bridges of the Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday built a legal fire under Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing's borrowed cook.

The New Hampshire Republican formally demanded that the Comptroller General's office break up the arrangement whereby Ewing has staffed his private kitchen at FSA headquarters with a chef from St. Elizabeths Hospital, a Government mental institution here.

The cook, Neaser J. Kelley, has been the object of bitter political wrangling between the Democratic Administration official and the Republican-controlled congressional group.

It all began when the committee hauled Kelley, still in his white chef's uniform, out of the FSA kitchen and to the witness stand to tell how he had spent about five hours daily for the past 10 months preparing luncheons for Ewing and his official guests. All the while, Kelley was listed as a head chef on the hospital's payroll.

Ewing replied at a news conference the next day that the hospital was being reimbursed for the part-time use of its cook out of FSA administrative funds. He said the arrangement was perfectly legal and proper, and that he had no intention of giving Kelley up because the private dining room saved valuable time of top FSA officials.

Bridges, on the other hand, contended in a letter to Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren yesterday that Congress never intended Ewing to have a cook.

He said that if Ewing had asked for a cook, the Senate Appropriations Committee would have "promptly denied" the request.

(Most Cabinet-level officers of the Government do have private dining rooms near their offices for luncheon conferences, and funds for staffing them are regularly provided by Congress.)

Bridges also wrote to Budget Director James E. Webb, asking that a survey be made to determine whether cook-borrowing is legal.

'Rubber' Check Buying Whirl Laid to Boy, 15

Alexandria police yesterday turned over to juvenile authorities a 15-year-old boy who, they said, had confessed to passing $234.50 worth of bad checks.

The boy told police he found a check book of an Alexandria bank lying in the street about a week ago. He wrote the figure "180" on the first check stub, police said, apparently as his bank balance and then went on a spending spree.

He admitted cashing eight checks. Among his purchases were a wrist watch for himself and one for a girl friend, a complete outfit of clothing, a fishing rod and reel and an automobile spotlight. He cashed two checks at the same restaurant —the second before the first had time to bounce.

Chase Nets 3 Numbers Suspects

Vice squad detectives yesterday arrested three suspected numbers operators after a 60-mile-an-hour auto chase down 14th st. se.

Shortly afterward two other gambling suspects were picked up, one in a laundry, and the other at her residence where a number of "dream books" analyzing subconscious thought as an indicator of the right number to play were seized with a quantity of slips.

Arrested after police chased them from 14th and T sts. se., to an alley several squares away, were Odell Harris, 23, 730 19th st. ne.; James Junior Chandler, 28, 728 13th st. ne., and Marvin William Martin, 38, 1244 1st st. sw.

They, together with Minnie Belle Weaver, 27, 610 L st. sw., who was seized at Carroll's Laundry, 14th and R sts. se., and Edna Sellman, 45, 1244 1st st. sw., were held in $1500 bond for appearance today before United States Commissioner Cyril Lawrence.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

JOE LOUIS' REPEATED declarations that he will hang 'em up and fight no more finds the Twentieth Century Sporting Club as the chief mourner. Mike Jacobs' firm is now threatened with loss of control of the heavyweight title after nearly 15 years of profitable promotions.

POVICH

For the Twentieth Century, the threat is real. As long as Louis held the title there was never any serious doubt that he would defend it for his benefactor, Mike Jacobs, who lent him huge sums as advance payments. And Jacobs always used the gimmick of signing all challengers to an agreement to defend Louis' title under the auspices of the Twentieth Century, if they happened to win it.

But with Louis quitting, and the title situation thrown wide open, Jacobs faces competition. Already Joe Walcott has tentatively accepted a fight with the winner of Washington's Ezzard Charles-Jimmy Bivins bout on September 13, if the National Boxing Association will recognize the survivor as the champion. And there is better than a good chance that the N. B. A. will do that little thing. It affords the N. B. A. bright opportunity to smash the Jacobs monopoly.

THERE WON'T be much quarrel with the N. B. A.'s decision if it recognizes the Walcott vs. the Charles-Bivins winner as a title fight. As long as Louis stays in retirement the best of that latter trio has the most legitimate claim to the championship. Joe Baksi is sometimes mentioned, but only with fingers held to the nose and Gus Lesnevich and his conqueror, Freddie Mills, are no longer title figures.

The Charles-Bivins fight here will go a long way toward turning up the next recognized champion, it seems. Washington, by a long coincidence, finds itself with a fight of importance. When the match was first signed back in early July, it held no particular title significance with Lesnevich still a top contender and Walcott also entitled to a shot at Louis' vacant crown.

But all of a sudden events crystallized to lift the Charles-Bivins affair into ned significance. The Variety Club, which is sponsoring the show, couldn't have gotten a better break if it had hired an assassin to go to England and dispose of Lesnevich. Mills did it just as completely, without intruding in the title picture himself.

THE CHARLES-BIVINS thing began thus to shape up as an important fight, and Matchmaker Gabe Menendez by hauling Walcott into the picture has given it a new zing. Walcott is eager to meet the winner and the possibility of a genuine heavyweight title fight in Washington, once to be laughed at, could now happen.

As I was saying, its the NBA's chance to scuttle what has been the tight monopoly of the Jacobs outfit and the New York Athletic Commission which has controlled the title in most classes. Recognition of the winner of the Charles-Bivins-Walcott elimination as the new champ would be accepted as fitting enough, despite the expected dissent of the New York Commission which recognizes only its own champions.

The NBA has not succeeded in developing any heavyweight champions who did not already bear the stamp of New York approval, but it has a nice record for designating the top contenders. At a time when Toney Galento was laughed at as an opponent for Joe Louis, the NBA rated him the No. 2 heavyweight and was rewarded when Galento put Louis on the floor before being counted out himself. It was the NBA which sponsored Walcott as Louis' chief rival and he had Louis down four times in two fights.

LOUIS SAYS HE won't retire officially until his six-month period of grace expires in late December, and there are no quarrel with that decision inasmuch as he has already announced his intentions. Louis next week will start on a political tour to campaign for a presidential candidate of his choosing and he wants to camjaign as heavyweight champion of the world.

The Twentieth Century is not expected to quit the heavyweight title promotion without a bitter struggle, you may be sure, and one form it is certain to take is an attemp to bring Louis back to the ring. As a consideration for getting a title fight with Louis, the designated challenger would then be bound to fight his future title bouts under the aegis of Mike Jacobs.

Maybe Jacobs can prevail on Louis to come back for the one more shot that would return title control to the Twentieth Century. But if Louis hews to his repeated desire to quit, the title that has been out of circulation in every State except New York since 1938, could find a new resting place.

Tigers Rout Feller, Beat Tribe, 7-3

Detroit, Aug. 10 (AP).—Bob Feller went down to his thirteenth defeat of the season here today as young Ted Gray snapped the Cleveland Indians' three-game winning streak and pitched the Detroit Tigers to a 7-to-3 victory.

Gray gave up all of the Indians' four hits and struck out 10 men in the 7 1-3 innings he worked before Art Houtteman finished for the Tigers, fanning two more.

Pat Mullin's fifteenth home run, one of four hits the Tigers bunched in the fifth, produced three runs and pinned the loss on Feller. It was Detroit's third victory over Feller this year and the second time a homer by Mullin scored the runs that whipped him.

Johnny Lipon also homered for the Tigers but it was after Don Black had come on in relief to serve up the last two of Detroit's 10 hits.

Italy Proposes Elimination of Basketball Giants

London, Aug. 10 (AP).—A "gentlemen's agreement" that would eliminate "Gullivers" from international basketball was proposed today to the International Amateur Basketball Federation by its vice president, Dr. Decio Scuri.

Scuri, who come from Italy—where basketball teams are neither to big nor too little—suggested a limit of 6 feet, 4¼ inches. This he said, would produce smoother basketball for "the good for the game."

Such a ruling would eliminate court giants such as the United States' Bob Kurland, who hits 7 feet. Bob has been booed several times because of the ease with which he cages the ball. He has taken it smiling.

Mount Rainier, Webb Win Softball Games

Judges Award '400' Relay to U. S.

Reverse Decision After Seeing Film

By Bob Considine

London, Aug. 10 (INS).—America won a true photo finish today in the Olympic track and field events held last Saturday when a jury reinstated our disqualified team as winner of the 400-meter relay.

Soon thereafter, a colored GI from the United States occupation forces in Tokyo won a decision in boxing which was so unpopular that the Americans in the stands began peering around nervously for the nearest exit.

The photo finish in question concerned an official reversal of last week's decision of two British judges that Barney Ewell and Lorenzo Wright illegally passed the baton in the blazing 400-meter relay finals.

As now must be known even in darkest Belgian Congo, the United States was disqualified, though Mel Patton, the anchor man, led his British opponent to the tape by 7 or 8 yards.

Today's decision was made by a six-man jury from the International Amateur Athletic Federation after a formal protests from Dean Cromwell, head coach of the American team. It means that Britain, the host nation, was completely shut out in track and field.

As a result of the decision, the British lads were asked today by the Olympic officials to give back the gold medals presented them with pomp and circumstance on Saturday.

The Italian four which finished behind the declared British "winners" must now give back their silver medals which will go to the second place British and officials hope for the best in acquiring the bronze medals given to the Hungarians for third place.

The Hungarians have gone home with their medals and getting them back over the Iron Curtain will be a test of the Olympic committee's skill in diplomacy.

Nod to Our Boxer Starts Near-Riot

Suffice it, to say, the now officially triumphant foursome of Barney Ewell, Lorenzo Wright, Harrison Dillard and Mel Patton who were timed in 40.5 seconds for the distance—six tenths behind the Olympic record—will be presented gold medals.

The problem of unsinging "God Save the King," which heralded the British victory by disqualification of the United States, remains to be settled.

See OLYMPIC, Page 17, Col. 5

PICTURE WINS RACE—After viewing the official film, Olympic officials were convinced that Barney Ewell (extreme left) had handed Lorenzo Wright the baton in the legal passing zone. They reversed their decision and awarded the 400-meter relay title to the United States. Certainly, it's obvious in the above shot that Wright has ample room before he reaches the end of the zone (arrow). It was a double victory for Ewell who insisted that Coach Dean Cromwell lodge the official protest.

Giants Shave Braves' Lead, Win, 6 to 5

Boston, Aug. 10 (AP).—The fourth place New York Giants tightened up the National League pennant race tonight by defeating the pace-setting Braves, 6-5, before 32,931 fans. The loss shaved the Braves' lead to three games over the Brooklyn Dodgers and St. Louis Cardinals and to five games over the Giants.

Bums Trim Phils, 5-2, As Barney Wins 10th

Brooklyn, Aug. 10 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers tied the idle St. Louis Cardinals for second place in the National League pennant race today by beating the Philadelphia Phillies, 5-2.

The Cards have won and lost one more game than the Dodgers but both teams have the same percentage, .545.

Pee Wee Reese supplied the Dodgers with their margin of victory, clubbing a three-run homer off Schoolboy Rowe with two out in the first inning.

Olympic Oddities

U. S. Scores 2d 'Photo' Victory; It Happened Before in 1908

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—America's victory today via the movies in the disputed 400-meter relay final, is the second time the United States athletes have won arguments by the use of pictures in Olympic games held in London.

The first time that movies—or the hints of moving pictures—aideded the Americans was in 1908.

That year, the Marathoners returned to the Olympic stadium for the final lap around the track after running 26 miles through the streets of London. The man in front was a weary Italian. In second place, and not far behind, was an apparently fresh American—Johnny Hayes.

When the Italian, Dorando Pietri, collapsed a short distance from the finish he was helped across by spectators and officials.

During the arguments that followed the American delegation hinted it had one of the newly invented moving picture cameras in its possession, and would show the pictures of the unsportsmanlike conduct at the games to all the world.

For Women Only

London, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Women hereafter must prove that they are women before they can compete in the Olympic Games.

The International Amateur Athletic Federation, in issuing the decree, also insisted upon proof of sex any time a world's record is set.

Medical certificates signed by doctors will be accepted as proof of sex. No evidence to show that a man competed as a woman was introduced into today's discussion, but the action by the federation indicated fear of such a fraud.

Russia May Unbend

London, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Russia will participate in the 1952 Olympic games "if we are invited," a Soviet representative said today.

Evan Nikolayewicz Pietuchow, heading a three-man Russian delegation at the International Amateur Federation Meeting, said the Soviets planned to organize an Olympic committee by the next Olympiad, which could accept an invitation to the classic.

When asked why the Russians had not accepted an invitation to compete this year, Pietuchow replied that it had come "rather late."

A Fight to Fight

London, Aug. 10 (AP).—When Argentine Flyweight Pascual Perez couldn't make the 112-pound weight in the Olympics today, they cut his hair on the scales.

He still couldn't make it. So they washed all the dirt off the bottom of his bare feet. Still he was a fraction over. In desperation, Argentina trainers gave him a rubdown and scraped dirt off the scales with a big paint brush.

No soap, Pascual was still over the weight and was led tearfully away.

But there was a happy ending. Hours later officials called Pascual in. The scales were off. He could fight.

Bosox Score 5 in 8th, Beat Yankees, 9-6

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—Vern Stephens' bases loaded double highlighted a five-run eighth inning rally tonight that enabled the Boston Red Sox to come from behand and beat the New York Yankees, 9-6.

Vic Raschi, Yankee ace and fourth New York pitcher, was charged with the loss, his fifth against 14 victories.

Trailing 6 to 4 by virtue of a three-run Yankee uprising in the seventh, the Sox worked Tommy Byrne for two walks as the eighth opened. When the southpaw threw a ball to Pinchhitter Stan Spence, Raschi came in and completed the pass. Dom DiMaggio singled home two runs to tie the score and after a sacrifice and an intentional pass filled the bases,

Macks Win, 11-2, After Losing, 8-2

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Shibe Park, Philadelphia, Aug. 10.—By dividing a twi-night twin bill with them this evening, the Nats kept the Athletics in their place—second.

Needing to capture both ends of the doubleheader to replace Cleveland as American League leaders, the Mackmen were victimized by Ray Scarborough and themselves and dropped the opener, 8-2, to the anguish of 28,490 fans.

Bill McCahan batted and pitched Connie Mack's contenders to an 11-2 decision in the night cap.

Stewart, Evans Homer

He restricted the Nats to five hits, two being home runs by Ed Stewart in the eighth and Al Evans in the ninth. At the plate McCahan terrorized the Nats, too, driving in five runs with a double, a walk and an outfield fly.

In registering his tenth success, Scarborough flipped a fancy eight-hitter and benefitted from three Mack errors which were responsible for five runs. Joe Coleman was tagged with the loss, his ninth against 11 triumphs.

Starter Walter Masterson and Milo Candini helped Mr. Mack's contenders in the nightcap. Masterson, suffering his ninth reversal, came out in the third inning when he threatened to make a walkaway of the game.

After Ferris Fain's double and Hank Majeski's single had raised the A's lead to 3-0, McCahan drew the sixth walk off Masterson to bring in another run and another pitcher, Candini.

He walked in the fourth run of the inning and also gave up three more runs in the fourth when McCahan doubled with the bases loaded. Mickey Haefner was the victim of Philadelphia's three-run eighth inning.

When Scarborough wasn't overpowering them with his fast ball in the first game, he was befuddling the Macks with his sharp curve. He allowed only two hits in the first five innings, one being an infield tap.

Franks Makes Costly Error

The Nats capitalized on an error by Catcher Herman Franks to score four runs, in the second inning and assume a lead which Scarborough held.

With one away and the bases loaded, Scarborough grounded to Hank Majeski, but Franks dropped Majeski's throw to the plate, enabling Mickey Vernon to score. Johnny Sullivan fanned, but Al Kozas delived the big blow of the game, a three-run double to right-center.

Earl Wooten singled in the fifth run and Jake Early's long fly to right scored Mark Christman to make it 6-0 in the third.

Ed Stewart upped the lead to 7-0 in the fourth by ramming a triple to left-center. The wallop scored Sullivan, who reached base on Ferris Fain's error.

Scarborough himself scored the final run, opening the sixth with a double. Sullivan's infield hit moved him to third from where he scored as Kozar rolled into a double play.

Scarborough lost his shutout in the sixth when Rookie Shortstop Billy De Mars came home as Sam Chapman grounded into a double play. McCosky's double, Chapman's single and Majeski's fly delivered the final Athletics' run.

Owner Leases El Mono

Altoona, Pa., Aug. 10 (AP).—Daniel "Dutch" Lamont, 40-year-old Altoona merchant, said today he had leased the famed stakehorse, El Mono, to Charles J. Margiotti, former attorney-general of Pennsylvania.

Buggy Derby Choice Draws No. 4 Post

By John Chandler

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 10 (AP)—The luck of the draw put Demon Hanover in the fourth post position—a favorable spot—for the Hambletonian classic at Good Time track tomorrow and enhanced the colt's status as the choice over 10 other of the Nation's finest trotters.

The crack standard breds will shoot for a gross purse of $59,941, third largest in the history of the event. The winner is to get 55 per cent or $32,500.

A record crowd of around 20,000 is expected to jam the stands overlooking the kite-shaped track. Thousands of fans already were here for today's opener of the four-day grand circuit program and this usually sleepy Orange County town bustled with activity.

Favorite Respected

Names of 11 horses were taken from the entry box at closing time today, just about what had been figured as the starting field after several owners had declared their charges out for one reason or another.

The main reason, of course, was Demon Hanover, the classy colt owned by Harrison Hoyt, the Connecticut amateur driver, seeking to become the first Simon-pure ever to guide a winner around Good Time's dusty course in America's great sulky derby.

This, coupled with the fact that several candidates had worked scintillating miles here last week in their final major preps, Demon Hanover and Rollo, whom many think will be the chief rival, both turned in 2:03 clockings for the mile.

The Hambletonian is decided on the best two-out-of-three mile heats, with the first heat scheduled for 2 p. m. (EST) post time.

Father-Son Rivalry

The two Whites, father, Ben, 75, and son, Gibson, 32, will engage in a friendly rivalry. The elder White drove Rosalind, owned by Gibson, to victory in the 1936 Hambletonian. He also won with Mary Reynolds, 1933, and with The Ambassador and Volo Song, in 1942 and 1943, both the latter owned by Strang. Only Hanover Shoe Farm, with three winners, has ever had more Hambletonian champions than Strang.

HAMBLETONIAN FIELD

The horses, with owners, drivers, probable odds listed in post positions for the twenty-third running of the Hambletonian Stake:

Signed Yesterday

Barrington, Ex-Quantico Star, Bolsters Redskins' Backfield

Los Angeles, Aug. 10.—The Redskins bolstered their fullback department today with the signing of Glenn Barrington, 195-pound scooter from Tampa, Fla.

Barrington was signed on the personal recommendation of Wilbur Moore, Washington's backfield coach. Moore first spotted Barrington during spring practice when Wilbur was loaned to the Quantico Marines to help install the T-formation system.

"Barrington starts fast and runs hard," said Moore, "and you can't ask for much more."

The compactly-built Tampa player has plenty of experience. In '42 he played for the University of Florida, and in '44 spent a season with Miami U. under the V-12 program. During the seasons of 1946-47 Barrington performed at Quantico.

After 5½ years in the Navy, during which he was in six major naval engagements aboard the carrier Bunker Hill, Barrington was released by the Navy just last week.

His presence gives the Redskins six fullbacks, the others being Sal Rosato, Roy McKay, Jim Hefti, Ed Quirk and Roger Dughi. Like Barrington, the latter two are rookies.

Work on new pass patterns featured today's drilling, and considerable time also was spent on fundamentals as the players prepped for the intrasquad game at Long Beach August 22.

Marx Retains Junior Crown

Scoring three runs in the eighth with the aid of three walks and a wild pitch, Marx Jewelry Co. defeated Georgetown, 4-3, yesterday on the Ellipse and clinched the Junior City League baseball championship for the second straight year.

Marx will represent Washington August 24 at Johnstown, Pa., in the All-American Amateur Baseball Association tournament. Marx won the big tourney last year.

Benny Duvall, 18-year-old lefthander, who pitched Coolidge High to the Interhigh championship in June, went all the way for Marx, scattering nine hits. His single in the eighth started the decisive rally with Marx trailing, 3-1.

Biff Jones, West Fight Again on Fox, Colan Card

A pair of Washington favorites, Harbie (Biff) Jones and Sonny Boy West, will share the two 10-round feature spots with Billy Fox and Johnny Colan on the Liberty Athletic Club's Griffith Stadium show Monday, August 23.

West knocked out Jones in the tenth round of their last bout in Baltimore last winter. Biff had suffered two previous knockdowns in the same bout, but had compiled a respectable point total until the final round.

In recent fights, West has lost decisions to Jimmy McAllister and Stonewall Jackson in Baltimore.

FOUR TONS AT WORK—Our Walter Haight (left) apparently is matching stride for stride with Tony Galento in yesterday's Spaghetti Handicap at Rocco's as Mrs. Florence Turner, Washington promoter, referees. However, Tony ate three plates, heaped with meat, sauce and grated cheese before challenging The Post's Mr. Appetite and still drew away to a four-spaghetti victory. Galento was working up energy for tonight's wrestling match at Griffith Stadium with Laverne Baxter. Max Baer will referee

Same Old Galento Challenges Baer, Louis and Other 'Bums'

Tony Galento halted spaghetti and beer training camp activities yesterday to burp challenges at Max Baer, Joe Louis and all comers.

The former heavyweight fighter and reformed East Orange, N. J., barkeep warned a press conference his wrestling bout with Laverne Baxter at Griffith Stadium tonight could become a three-way affair if Referee Max Baer fails to maintain the proper impartial decorum.

A beery froth lending color to his picture of righteous indignation, Two Ton paused in his tirades against "that hard-headed bum" Baer just long enough to invite retiring Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis to swap punches in an exhibition bout for charity.

Tony, who claims his only connection with his Jersey saloon is that of rent-collecting "landlord," exhibited a trim 275 pounds as proof of his ability to handle "da bum."

On the supporting mat card tonight Golden Superman, latest of the masked marvels, will take on Sandor Kovacs in the semifinal.

Capital Nine Suffers First Tourney Loss

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 10.—Washington absorbed its first defeat in the double-elimination Union Printer's National Baseball Tournament here today, bowing to New York, 6 to 5, in an 11-inning struggle.

George Mosedale, who relieved Gen Collins in the ninth inning when New York tied the score at 5-all, was charged with the defeat when Harry Lahey, New York shortstop, singled across the winning run. It was Lahey's third hit of the game.

Ed Petrazzolo, New York starting pitcher, struck out eight Washington batters and gave seven hits in the 7 1/3 innings he worked, departing during an eighth inning two-run rally that gave Washington a 5-4 lead.

But New York came back to tie it up and squeezed across another run in the 11th to win.

Collins fanned 13 men before he left the game and Mosedale struck out four New York hitters, but the two of them yielded a total of 11 hits, two more than the Washington team collected.

County Stars Trim D.C. Boys

Three squeeze plays and sensational southpaw hurling sparked the Prince Georges County All Stars to a 3-2 trimming of the Washington Boy's Club All Stars yesterday at Maryland U.

Bob Costinette, Hyattsville High School ace, allowed no hits, no walks, and struck out six Washington boys in the four innings he pitched. Costinette's feat coupled with three squeeze plays, which brought in three runs in the Prince Georges' half of the fourth, cinched the game for the winners.

Washington rallied in the fifth for two earned runs. Losing pitcher was Frank Conrad.

Judges Change Ruling on 400

but the British took the blow philosophically.

This was far from the case in the decision which gave Eddie Johnson, a Negro GI from Kansas City, a nod over B. Alves of Uruguay, in a second-round match in the featherweight boxing division.

Johnson, who was on furlough from Tokyo to fight with the American boxing team, appeared to this writer to have an edge over his shorter South American rival because of superior defense.

But the vast majority of the fans banked around the ring, which is built over the water in the Empire Pool, thought the decision was horribly unfair. They joined in a demonstration which nearly reached riot proportions and the cops and Scotland Yard men had to be called out.

The furor began when the Uruguayan judge who voted for Alves stood up waving his arms indignantly when the other judges outvoted him in favor of the American.

In keeping with the day's reversals, protests and general bickering, there was trouble at Torquay in the yachting with many charges that the crews of different nations cut buoys, wouldn't give way, etc. The climax of this debate came when Argentina had the Swiss star class yacht disqualified.

Americans did well on most fronts today as the Olympic games neared their climax, and the American basketball team made ready to play the semifinals tomorrow against Mexico. The favored American team is expected to meet Brazil in the finals.

It must be pointed out that there were no protests in the equestrian dressage event, which is so impeccable that a muscle twitch counts against the performer.

District Cop Defies Gun and Disarms Man

A Third Precinct policeman boldly disarmed a District Highway Department clerk of a loaded and cocked automatic pistol, pointed directly at the policeman's stomach, early yesterday.

Basnight

He was Pvt. Thomas B. Basnight, 28, one of the first members of the force to be named "Policeman of the Month," when the award was originated last winter.

"When you get into a situation like that, you act before you can actually think," he explained later.

The clerk, William Huntsberger, 32, of 1765 Q st. nw., later pleaded not guilty in Municipal Court to a charge of making threats in a menacing manner. He was ordered held under $1000 bond for a jury trial set for September 2.

Basnight's Version

After the excitement had died down, Basnight gave the following account of the event:

"Shortly before 4 a. m., my partner, Pvt. Joseph O'Connell, and I were cruising in a squad car when we heard a radio call that a shot had been fired at 1765 Q st. nw.

"We drove there immediately, and while I was getting out of the scout car, I heard another shot fired in the basement there. At the same time, I heard a woman plead: 'Please don't shoot again.'

"The basement door was open, so I walked right in. It was then I saw Huntsberger standing in the door of the kitchin with his hand behind him. He demanded, 'What do you want?'

"I figured he had a gun, so I rushed across the room. As soon as I got in front of him he poked this German automatic in my ribs, slid it down into my stomach and cocked it.

Officer Acts Fast

"Meanwhile his wife, Geraldine, moved over next to my right side, so I had to use my left fist to hit and gripped the wrist of his hand him. I caught him before he fell holding the gun.

"At that moment O'Connell came in. He immediately stuck his thumb between the hammer and the firing pin to jam the gun. It was all over fast."

Basnight said that Huntsberger explained later that he had not intended to shoot him, but only wanted to keep the policeman out of his apartment.

Huntsberger originally fired the gun at a whisky bottle on the dresser which he was using for target practice, Basnight said. He said one bullet had smashed the bottle and another had struck the wall. Two exploded cartridges were in the gun when Huntsberger pointed it at Basnight, the policemen said.

O'Connell Huntsberger

Mrs. Huntsberger told police that the gun had been issued to Huntsberger the day before for protection because there had been a recent theft form the apartment, according to the policeman.

Basnight received his "Policeman of the Month" 'award for his part in the rescue of an aged woman from a burning house in the 1700 block of P st. nw. last January.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Displaced Persons Commission Is New Federal Agency

A new Federal agency is being set up. It's the Displaced Persons Commission.

The agency was created by Congress to find homes in this country for some of Europe's refugees. But before it can operate it must find a home here itself. The same old story—no office space.

The commission will have a comparatively small staff in this city. It will have several offices abroad. When it gets going, it will need people with investigative experience to go abroad to make a check on the displaced persons, among others, who wish to enter this country.

Temporary offices of the commission are in the State Department Building. The commission, an independent agency, will have three members. It's reported that Ugo Carusi, former Justice and State official, will be chairman. Before it adjourned, Congress gave the agency 2 million dollars for administrative expenses.

LOYALTY: Another congressional committee is taking a look at the employe loyalty problem. The House Appropriations Committee has sent a questionnaire to each Federal agency seeking information on the workload and disposition of the loyalty cases.

AFGE: With his supporters claiming victory, James B. Burns is reported to have decided definitely to run for reelection as president of the AFL's American Federation of Government Employes. A statement of his candidacy and policies will be released by Burns later this week.

A Burns campaign committee was formed Monday night at a meeting in the Commerce Building. At the meeting, pledges of support were made from representatives of half of the union's membership here.

Laurence C. Wainwright of Bolling Field was named chairman of the Burns Committee. Irene K. Bradley of Employes Compensation is secretary and Iris Myers of VA is treasurer.

Burns is reported to have the support of 90 per cent of the AFGE locals in both Philadelphia and New York, and the full backing of the 600-man group in the Canal Zone. James Yaden of the Civil Service Commission is Burns' only opposition so far.

NOTES: Glenn Stahl has been officially designated as personnel director of the Federal Security Agency . . . P. O. Ward is to be named acting staff director of the Senate Expenditures Committee. Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) will be in line to be chairman of that committee since Senator Aiken (R., Vt.) will take over the Agriculture Committee . . . J. C. Capt, the Census director, is recovering from two serious operations . . . A testimonial dinner for Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming will be held August 23 at the Mayflower. Flemming leaves on September 1 to be president of Ohio Wesleyan. Former President Herbert Hoover is scheduled to speak at the dinner.

EXAMS: In a move to attract bright young college graduates to the Federal service, the Civil Service Commission will announce an exam this fall for junior management assistant. The test will be open to senior students.

But before the test is given the commission hopes to have the major agencies commit themselves in advance to take a specified number who qualify for jobs. The reason for this is because the junior administrative technician test—a similar exam—was a farce as very few young people who passed it were chosen for jobs.

HIGH-GRADES: Civil Service also is planning a number of exams for higher-grade jobs. The exams have merely been postponed—not abandoned—because of the illness of two examiners who are in charge of the project.

Civil Service people concede that some of the top-bracket people have a legitimate squawk since they have been given no opportunity to obtain permanent status through competitive tests. The uncertainty has caused some of them to quit Government and more will follow unless Civil Service gets a move on.

SPECULATION: One of the current stories on what Dewey will do if he's elected President is this—that he'll cancel all temporary and war service appointments. The President has the power to do it.

The story sounds to me like so much idle gossip. Canceling the appointments might sound like a good thing to do, but a three-minute study should convince anyone that it would be ridiculous. In the first place the Government today has thousands of jobs open and very few qualified applicants to fill them. So why create more openings? And after all, the war service and temporary people at least have experience and job know-how.

NOTES: At the emergency session of Congress, Representative Le Compte (R., Iowa) authored a bill to exempt posts and war veteran groups from the tax on billiard and pool tables. . . . The Naval Ordnance Laboratory at nearby White Oak, Md., has openings for stenos, typists, mechanics and engineers. . . . Former Senator Jim Mead of New York will have solid backing for Labor Secretaryship if Maurice Tobin of D. . . turns it down.

$3,273,000 Low Bid to Start Work On Hospital

Philadelphia Firm's Figure Million Under D. C. Builder's for Basement, 1st Floor

A low bid of $3,273,000 for initial construction work on the 13-story medical research hospital center at Bethesda, Md., has been submitted by McCloskey & Co., builders, of Philadelphia, it was revealed yesterday when five bids were opened at the Federal Works Agency.

Present funds available for the project total 5 million dollars with congressional authority to contract for an additional $25,630,000 for erecting and equipping the center.

Yesterday's bids were for excavation, foundation work, basement and first-floor construction.

The completed center will house the National Institute of Mental Health, hospital facilities of the National Cancer Institute, the National Heart Institute and the National Institute of Dental Research.

Besides the McCloskey Co., other bidders were: John McShain Inc., Philadelphia, $3,762,000; Charles H. Tompkins Co., Washington, $4,233,954; Virginia Engineering Co., Inc., Newport News, Va., $4,949,000; and Thompson-Starret Co., Inc., New York, $4,996,000.

While only $30,630,000 has actually been authorized for the proposed 40-million-dollar center, Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing has stated that the remaining 10 millions will come from special grants and supplemental congressional appropriations.

The center will house a 500-bed hospital in addition to research laboratories. About 55 of the Nation's outstanding architects consulted on planning the elaborate structure.

St. Elizabeths Charge to Jolt D. C. Finances

District finances received another jolt yesterday when the Budget Bureau reported it will be charged $4.15 a day for its patients in St. Elizabeths Hospital instead of the former $3.65.

Increased costs, exclusive of the recent pay raise for District employes, had been anticipated and the budget estimates for the current fiscal year were based on a $3.90 charge.

However, the new figure represents an additional drain on the District of approximately $435,000.

$88,000 Lopped Off

At that, about $88,000 had been lopped off an original request from the Federal Security Agency which administers the hospital. The FSA had asked $4.20 a day for each of the approximately 4800 patients cared for at District expense.

Hospital officials pointed out that while the new rate at the hospital was far above the national average for mental patients, services performed and the care given in general including diet was greatly above that of similar hospitals elsewhere.

In addition, it was said, the cost at St. Elizabeths is still well below that of mental hospitals under the jurisdiction of the Veterans Administration.

Cost $6,230,000 Last Year

The District was charged about $6,230,000 at the $3.65 rate in effect for the last fiscal year. A total of $6,682,000 was provided for this expense in the appropriations bill for the 1949 fiscal year which began last July 1.

District budget officials could not say yesterday how the net increase in cost will be met. It is retroactive to July 1.

Democrats to Meet

Democratic Party workers in Montgomery County will meet at 7:30 p. m. Thursday in the Rock Creek Field House, Beech dr. and Leland st., Chevy Chase, Md., to plan a county picnic and rally for next month.

SHERON (LEFT), 4, AND WANDA DuKATE, 2, ARE HOME AGAIN WITH MOTHER AND DAD, MR. AND MRS. GEORGE DuKATE, AFTER RECOVERING FROM POLIO

District Area Reports 5 New Polio Cases

Five new cases of infantile paralysis were reported by the District Health Department yesterday, bringing the year's total for the Washington area to 58.

Newest District victims listed by the Health Department include a 13-year-old boy living in the 2500 block of L st. nw., a 3-year-old boy of the 1900 block of 37th st. nw., and a 3½-year-old girl of the 1400 block of Van Buren st. nw.

Cases from nearby Virginia involved a 14-month-old boy of the 2100 block of S. Joyce st., Arlington, and a 6-year-old boy from Quantico.

The Arlington victim was the county's eighth of the year.

At the same time last year, the Health Department said, only three resident and seven nonresident polio cases had been reported to the department.

A check of cases reported this year showed yesterday they have come from widely scattered points in the Washington area, and there is no indication of a concentration of the disease in any one section. No deaths have been reported to date.

Virginia's ninth polio fatality that of a 36-year-old Glen Allen woman at the Medical College of Virginia Monday, was reported yesterday.

In Virginia, eight new cases were reported to the State Health Department, sending the State's total for the year to 146. The reports listed the cases of a 7-year-old Richmond girl, two brothers, 3 and 4, in Floyd County, a 16-year-old boy and a 26-year-old man in Lynchburg, a 10-year-old girl in Campbell County and a 6-year-old boy in Culpeper County.

Meanwhile, in North Carolina, Dr. Roy Norton, State Health officer, yesterday reiterated his hope that the State's worst epidemic was on a decline, after receiving reports of 32 new cases.

The day's cases brought the State's total to 1348, with 95 reported so far this month. In all of July 836 cases were listed.

$35 Cashier Accused as Embezzler

A $35-a-week cashier of Anchorage Transportation, Inc., a bus line here, was charged yesterday with embezzling company funds.

He was Blair Wayne Stevenson, 22, of the Lee Sheraton Hotel, who was ordered held under $1000 bond for grand jury action by United States Commissioner Cyril Lawrence.

Police arrested Stevenson Monday night after company officials reported he had embezzled $100 August 8. The company found the money was missing after setting a trap, police said.

Although Stevenson was arraigned on the one offense only, police said he told them he had embezzled about $2500 since he started work at the company last April.

He told police that the bus drivers turned in their fare boxes to him without counting the money when they came off duty, police said. Company officials did not suspect him, until he began to increase the amount of cash he withheld after counting the receipts of the day, police said.

The company then arranged for the bus drivers to count their receipts before turning them over to Stevenson August 8, according to police. It was then, that company officials found a $100 discrepancy, police said.

Police said Stevenson was a war veteran and has an 18-year-old wife.

2 Sisters, Stricken Same Day With Polio, Conquer Disease

Two young sisters who were stricken with infantile paralysis the same day four weeks ago have recovered and are happily back home at 1120 N. Kensington st., Arlington.

Wanda DuKate, 2, a blue-eyed blonde, returned home two weeks ago; her snub-nosed, brunette sister, Sheron, 4, was released from Children's Hospital yesterday.

A group of hale youngsters surged up to the DuKates' apartment door in the afternoon to welcome Sheron. Leading them was Betty Rae Turner, 7, who gasped in one long breath:

"You're back and I'm glad and I have a surprise for you, Sheron."

Wanda was more fortunate. She suffered no paralysis symptoms though her spinal fluid showed presence of the polio virus, when first stricken.

Their physician reports that many youngsters similiarly stricken do recover from the dread affliction. Wanda and Sheron are the children of George DuKate, accountant with Riddell Realty Co., 1742 K st. nw., and Mrs. Jeanette DuKate, who regarded Tuesday, August 10, as a day for thanksgiving.

Singer Who Sat on Abe's Knee Passes 97th (Approx.) Marker

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

MME. SUZANNE OLDBERG

In the flower of childhood, she sat on Lincoln's knee

Mme. Suzanne Oldberg, who once sat on Abraham Lincoln's knee, celebrated what she admitted was something near her ninety-seventh birthday yesterday.

Mme. Oldberg, a well-known singer in her younger days and a music teacher for many years, once had a studio in the Belasco Theater.

One of her former pupils, D. Edbert K. Ruhl, Metropolitan Opera star, visited her yesterday in her room at 4103 Connecticut ave. nw. and sang to her in honor of the occasion. She was his first teacher.

Her father, Maj. A. H. Johnson, was private secretary to Edwin Stanton, Lincoln's Secretary of War. It was during a visit in his office that she sat on Lincoln's knee.

Mme. Oldberg attributed her long life to always "loving people and living life fully."

"Love," she said, "is master of the world and can accomplish anything. The rules of a successful home are based on love and personal interest."

She still has a rosy complexion and fine white hair, and the dozens of persons who wandered in and out of her room yesterday insisted that she is as sprightly as a young woman.

Mme. Oldberg cleverly refused to be pinned down to a definite age and is not worried about future birthdays. She calmly assured a reporter that she would see him again next year.

Health Officer Must Explain Sewage Fault

Alexandria City Council last night ordered the city's health officer to appear at a special meeting next Tuesday to explain why no action has been taken to correct the flow of raw sewage onto a playground.

Mayor William T. Wilkins, at last night's council meeting, called the condition "most grave and terrible."

The playground involved, he said, is the one at Cameron Valley, a Government housing development for Fort Belvoir personnel at the west edge of the city. He said he saw the sewage himself last Saturday and learned the situation had existed for two years. It had been reported, he said he was told, to the City Health Department several times but no action has been taken.

Colasanto Identifies House

City Manager Nicholas A. Colasanto identified the house, from which the sewage comes. He said the owner had an argument with the house's previous owner as to who should pay the cost of connecting with the city sewer main. Colasanto said he had instructed the present owner yesterday to make the connection immediately.

John Y. Kerr, assistant executive director of the Alexandria Housing Authority, which administers Cameron Valley, told the council that, on Duke st., just east of Cameron Valley, drainage from basins, sinks and tubs flowed into a stopped-up drain and was oozing onto sidewalks, another unsanitary condition in vicinity of the development.

The council decided at Tuesday's meeting it also will ask the health officer about this situation.

The Washington Post several weeks ago carried an article on still other unsanitary conditions about the city.

In other actions last night, the Council:

1. Appropriated $750 for a study of the amount of money needed to start a pension plan for city employes.

2. Gave permission to the Wallace-for-President Club of Northern Virginia to set up a booth on King st. Saturday to obtain names for a petition to put the Progressive Party on the State ballot in the November election.

3. Sent to its finance committee for study a proposal to raise the starting pay of policemen from $2160 to $2400 annually.

Magazine To Print New Map of D. C.

Washington's mushrooming growth is graphically illustrated in a unique map recently completed by the National Geographic Society as a supplement to the National Geographic Magazine for September.

The map, the first up-to-date chart of Washington since prewar days, locates virtually everything of public interest in the Washington area including schools, scientific institutions, parks, streetcar lines, bus routes, police precincts, theaters, churches, newspaper offices and plants, monuments and statues.

Many important Government buildings — the Capitol, White House and Federal Triangle buildings—and other landmarks are outlined as seen from the air.

Foundation of the map was an aerial survey of the city and suburbs resulting in 361 photographs as a starting point to form compilation of data.

The map, printed on both sides of a sheet of 31¾ inches by 24¼ inches and to a scale of 4 inches to a mile, also will be sold independent of the magazine. Price will be 50 cents for paper copies and $1 for linen copies. They will go on sale September 12 at the society's headquarters, 16th and M sts. nw.

Three Charged With Defrauding Veterans Here

Indictments Allege 26 Victims Were Bilked Out of Home Payments

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

A real estate man and two associates were indicted here yesterday for mail fraud on charges of bilking 26 veterans out of a total of $14,000 in down payments for low-cost houses equipped with swimming pools.

The District grand jury returned the true bills against Matthew P. Lucas, 50, of 1006 N st. nw., James A. Mabrey, 36, of 42 S st. nw., and Charles F. McCadden, 27, no known address.

The 13-count indictment said that Lucas, who was an $1822-a-year employe at Gallinger Hospital, concocted a plan with the other two men to develop a plot of ground in Prince Georges County, near Oxon Run Park and Camp Simms, into an elaborate housing development known as Bethune Gardens. They used direct sales methods, circulars and newspaper advertisements to get customers, it was said.

They falsely stated, it was charged, that they owned the property and had authority to build the housing development on it. In reality, the charges said, they merely had made a $2000 deposit for the $42,500 plot of land and never constructed a house.

The defendants used the veterans money, it was charged, to enter into a scheme to build an apartment house on a $77,000 plot on New Hampshire ave., but failed to purchase this ground also.

The alleged victims paid between $10 and $1200 each for the ground and houses they were told would be built by "highly skilled" builders for between $4000 and $6000. Some of the purchasers were told they could have a choice of a rock garden or swimming pool in their backyards, investigators said.

The scheme was hatched when the defendants formed a Delaware corporation known as Veterans Opportunities, Inc. They started accepting the deposits in April, 1946, but before that year was out, the project was abandoned.

No restitution has been made to the veterans, it was said. More than $1000 of the veterans' money was spent for advertising, another $3600 for salaries, and office and other expenditures ate up the $14,000.

Six persons were charged with violations of gaming laws here in other indictments.

Police Pvt. Frank N. Manthos said that he sat in the Orchard Restaurant, 903 9th st. nw., and witnessed an apparently thriving business in numbers and horse-bet operation going on before him.

Indicted on his charges were George D. Craig, 52, of 903 9th st. nw.; Clark P. Stocksill, 47, of 903 9th st. nw.; John A. Tolson, 52, of 2918 M st. nw., and George Beal, 48, no address given. The indictment charged ther with operation of a lottery, setting up a gaming table and possession of numbers slips.

Two men were charged with operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips in the rear room of a confectionery at 2634 Georgia ave. nw. They are Herbert Hall, 41, of 44½ Hanover st. nw., and Lawrence E. Wood, 36, of 3332 Sherman ave. nw.

Charles C. Richardson, 41, of 2304 14th st. nw., was charged with the ax murder March 31 of John Lomax, 15 Lamond pl. nw. The motive for the first degree murder was robbery, police said. Richardson was also charged with stealing $105 from Lomax.

Crowding Forces Nine From Jail

Alexandria Police Court Judge James R. Duncan released nine prisoners from the Alexandria City Jail yesterday because the jail is overcrowded.

None of the nine had finished their sentences.

The judge acted after City Sergt Claude W. Fletcher, who is in charge of the jail, reported he had to put mattresses on the jail floor for prisoners to sleep on after an exceptionally large group had been brought in for weekend offenses.

In freeing the nine, Judge Duncan made his first reply to criticism from a grand jury that he had gone too light on the habitual drunks coming before him. The judge said he regarded the habitual drunk primarily a medical, rather than criminal, problem.

Compels Minimum Sentences

"If the jail can't cope with the prisoners when I impose a minimum sentence, what would happen if I gave them the maximum sentences as the jury wanted?" he asked.

The freed prisoners had from five to nine days to serve to complete their sntences. One had been sentenced to 15 days for disorderly conduct. The others had been jailed for 15 days when unable to pay drunkenness or dice-shooting fines.

Fletcher said the jail has occasionally overflowed before, but that usually it is adequate for the city's needs. Capacity of the building is 137, but it can be overcrowded, he said, with less than that number because men must be separated from women and white prisoners from Negro.

Jail Given "Excellent Report"

Fletcher said the jail received an "excellent report" after a recent State investigation and pointed out that Alexandria recently completed repairs to the jail building, including a new kitchen. Fletcher said he is opposed to proposals for a regional jail because, he said, a regional jail is too costly and inconvenient.

Replying to the grand jury, Judge Duncan said there is no way now that he can send a drunk to a clinic. He indicated that until such clinical facilities are available he will continue to assess $10 fines as he has in the past.

Irvin M. Hufford, local restaurateur and member of the grand jury, commented yesterday: "The fact that the jail is full or empty should have no bearing on the sentences imposed by the police court judge."

Lawyer Falls In Taxi's Path; Head Injured

An Arlington, Va., resident was in an undetermined condition last night after falling in the path of a taxicab at 14th st. near F st. nw. late yesterday afternoon.

The victim, identified at Emergency Hospital as Newton Montgomery, 43, of 3826 N. Vernon st., Arlington, is a lawyer with the Social Security Agency here.

Operator of the cab was listed by police as Charles L. Burke, 27, of 2535 13th st. nw. Burke was driving home with his wife and step-daughter when the accident occurred.

Witnesses were quoted by police as saying Montgomery was standing near the curb when he reeled backward and fell into the street, striking his head either against the pavement or the side of the cab. He had undergone a hip operation last November and was using crutches when he fell.

Detective Fred Williams, who investigated, said Montgomery's head came to rest between the cab wheels and credited the quick stop made by Burke with averting instant death.

First aid was given on the scene by Dr. Beth Glover of Emergency Hospital. Montgomery is being treated for scalp lacerations and possible skull fracture.

A Detroit couple, last night were victims of a head-on collision with a truck on the Viers Mill rd., near Rockville, Md.

Tamm Pay Puzzle To Be Solved by U. S. Comptroller

The comptroller general was asked yesterday to decide whether Justice Edward A. Tamm should be paid for sitting on the District Court bench.

The ruling was requested by the administrative office of the Federal Courts, the agency which pays Justice Tamm his $15,000 yearly salary.

Tamm was appointed to the bench last June while Congress was in its regular session. But Congress did not confirm the former FBI official. Then, when a special session was called, Tamm's name was resubmitted but again no action was taken upon the confirmation.

Under the law, with certain exceptions, unless Congress confirms the appointment after it reconvenes, pay for the appointee ceases. The special session having ended, some authorities believe that Tamm is ineligible for salary.

Area News in Brief

Park Orator Faces Trial as Beggar

A New York lawyer who claims he has formed an association of frequenters of Franklin Park was charged yesterday in Municipal Court with soliciting alms.

The lawyer, Philip Warren, 42, who gave his address as the Ambassador Hotel, pleaded innocent and the case was continued until Tuesday.

The court hearing yesterday was enlivened when Warren protested bitterly a proposal by Assistant United States Attorney C. Frank Reifsnyder that he be given a mental examination.

Warren insisted the charges had been brought against him largely because of competition among Franklin Park orators, he being one of them. He said he had become so popular the other speakers had lost their audience appeal.

Judge Armond Scott refused Reifsnyder's proposal for a mental examination and allowed Warren to go free on his personal bond. When Warren estimated that the trial would take a week, the judge said he would request a special judge and separate courtroom.

Warren said he had formed a corporation called the Franklin Park Civic and Humane Association, devoted, he said, to charitable purposes including aid to the impoverished members of the park habitues.

King identified the women as Alberta Randall, 19, of 910 Queen st., Alexandria, and Verlene Johnson, 19, of 514 Oronoco st., Alexandria. Each was released on a $500 bond.

King said the women obtained the bond from a home where a friend worked as a maid and cashed it at its current value of ards Act. The injunction suit $68.81. Police said when Van Houten called at the farm Decatur said he owned, in Frederick County, Md., he could find no sign of the calves or any one who had ever heard of Decatur.

Raedy Charge Proof Awaited Another Day

Judge Ellen K. Raedy yesterday still had not furnished proof to back up the "serious accusation" she made last Friday against the Corporation Counsel's office.

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West said he had not received a reply to his request that Judge Raedy substantiate her charge that members of the Corporation Counsel's staff nolle prosse cases for their friends.

Judge Raedy, who yesterday resumed her duties in the jury branch of the Municipal Court criminal division, could not be reached for comment on the situation after court adjourned. A reporter for The Washington Post who called Judge Raedy's chambers after court adjournment was told the judge was in conference but would return the call.

When the call was not returned, other calls to Judge Raedy's residence at Dorchester House and the home of her husband, Johnston R. Zimmerman, 8104 Larry pl., Rock Creek Forest, elicited information that Judge Raedy had gone "out to dinner and then to some sorority affair, I believe."

No new conflicts between Judge Raedy and the Corporation Counsel's office developed yesterday. Only one case prosecuted by that office was on the docket yesterday. Mrs. Rosie Lee Arsenault, 45, of 4600 Chevy Chase blvd., Chevy Chase, Md., who had asked for a jury trial, changed her plea to guilty to three counts of rent control law violations. Judge Raedy signified she would turn the case over to the probation office for presentence investigation.

In the single jury trial before Judge Raedy yesterday, the United States vs. Bill Brown, Judge Raedy dismissed the charges after the conclusion of evidence of the plaintiff. Brown was charged with simple assault on James A. Dade near a Georgia ave. tavern on June 18.

Reshuffle Slated

School Roll Gains to Tax Bus Service

An expected heavy increase in Montgomery County school enrollment this year will cause major reshuffling of school bus service, it was disclosed yesterday.

Now under way is a survey by William B. Marks, director of transportation, aimed at discovering improvements that will provide maximum service with the limited number of buses.

Marks told the Montgomery County School Board yesterday that of the 18,000 county pupils last school year, 9859 were transported in the 75 county school buses. A pupil increase of 2500 has been estimated for this fall. And many of this fall's new pupils, he said, live in new developments remote from the present school bus routes.

School officials warned many students who formerly used school buses may be forced this fall to use public transportation to lighten the load. They ordered Marks to work out new bus routes and school attendance areas for approval at a special school board meeting the last week in August.

Catholic Action Failure Hit by McNamara

Catholics are failing to exert the influence they should on American life, the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, Auxuliary Bishop of Washington, declared yesterday.

The Bishop made this statement in addressing the nearly 1000 students attending the summer school of Catholic Action this week at Catholic University.

Bishop McNamara commended the summer school on its work but declared that its existence is "an admission of failure on the part of Catholic churches and schools to teach the necessity for Catholics to assume their obligation for the work of the church."

Comparing "Catholic action" and "Communist action," the Bishop told his audience that "the Communist desire to share their cause is making their impact great despite their relatively small numbers."

"Catholics are relatively large in number but weak in influence," he added.

Bishop McNamara declared help of the laity is needed in order that "teaching of Christianity may be put to work."

"Christianity must be made known more vigorously," he said.

He also declared that secularism taught in nonreligious schools and colleges "has prepared the way for the complete acceptance of un-Christian ways of life."

Before his address in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception on the college campus, Bishop McNamara celebrated a community mass.

The summer school of Catholic Action, which consists of both night and day classes, will continue through Saturday.

Our Own Spy Unearths Red, Red Robin Incident And Progressive Corn

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

MOST of Washington's Vassar graduates of the same vintage as Elizabeth Bentley, the former Communist who has been spilling beans with such abandon on the Hill, are fit to be tied because they simply don't remember her. However, one, Daisy Chainer, equipped with more supple memory, eventually disinterred an exciting item! Yes, yes, yes, even in those days La Bentley's most absorbing extra-curricular activity definitely was red-tinged! She was a member of the Wake Robin Club, a groupie which rose before dawn, staggered out to spy on birds! (Robins are red-breasted, get it?)

A Corny Expedition

PERSISTENT reports of subversive activities right here in Gerogetown finally stung this department to action. Undoubted Progressive parties, perhaps Communists, were flaunting their colors not too subtly by growing Wallace hybrid corn in front of a prosperous looking house. Hurrying over to 26th st. just above P st. we found three giant stalks of corn sprouting from a scrap of tidy lawn.

To make matters worse one of the stalks was badly bent and had been splinted straight with very red wool! The house was shuttered, no one answered our insistent ringing. Pursuing inquiry from house to house we encountered an elderly character, evidently the block's handyman.

"Wallace corn? No such thing!" he snorted scornfully, "that's Country Gentleman! I planted it by accident last April. They've had four ears from it already."

Thwarted as Senator Ferguson must sometimes be, we retreated gracefully, determined to keep our noses from further Communist investigation.

India's Holiday

AUGUST 15 is Independence Day in India and over there on all national holidays it is customary for the well-heeled to distribute alms among the less fortunate. They go in for fireworks and such, too, especially in Ghandi's part of India. This year, due to Ghandi's death, all celebrations will be muted in India and here at the embassy.

But the ladies, wives of embassy and mission staff members, some 16 of them, have found a way to carry on home tradition. In groups of four they'll do voluntary service at local hospitals, not only on Independence Day but during the week.

The District Council of Social Services has arranged their itinerary and they'll visit the Hill Crest Child's Village, the children's section of Gallinger Hospital, the Children's Clinic of George Washington, the Christ Child Farm in Rockville, the Episcopal Home for Children.

In conjunction with India's holiday the Library of Congress has arranged a special exhibition of Indian books which sounds very interesting indeed.

After a morning ceremony at the embassy the new Ambassador and Lady Rama Rau will be at home to all Indian nationals in Washington.

Charity Party Backfires

THE Park Avenue charity party, which turned into a gambling fest and rooked an assortment of Gotham's cafe socialites of fantastic sums, may hit the grand jury because one of the guests, West Coast polo player Tom Sullivan, later was beaten up. The "party" took place in the penthouse of the late Conde Nast which is now occupied by Mrs. Vivienne Woolley-Hart.

Blonde, svelte Vivienne, who has skimmed the prewar international set, has a slight but interesting Washington tie-up. Second among her five husbands was Count von Bernstorff, nephew of the notorious First World War German Ambassador. Mrs. Woolley-Hart, who hails from Burlington, N. J., first married an American, discarding him for Von Bernstorff, then the handsome Junker for one of his intimates. She then married Britain's coal tycoon, Arthur Woolley-Hart. As Mrs. Woolley-Hart she acquired a large house in London's Prince's Gate, did it over in 1929-1930 modern, proceeded to out-Maxwell Elsa with a series of elaborate parties. At one everyone came dressed in button decorated costumes, at another, given for an Indian maharajah, she hired a live elephant. When the elephant proved too bulky the interpid Vivienne called for a derrick, had the angrily trumpeting creature hoisted over the garden wall.

In France, she rented a chateau not far from Paris, gave a Tyrolean party which made history. During the war she moved to Bermuda, bought Tuckers Island, which is now part of the United States naval base. Woolley-Hart died in Bermuda during the war and a year or so ago his widow dipped briefly in and out of matrimony with a handsome Pole named Ackston.

At one time Vivienne owned the Jubilee diamond, a 90-odd carat affair (almost twice as big as the Hope diamond) which she wore on gala occasions set in a ring covering her third finger from base to fingertip. The diamond and an emerald necklace have more or less melted into limbo land and Vivienne, who took up painting seriously, runs an art gallery in what was once one of the loviest apartments in New York.

Fame Precedes Couple

New Turkish Ambassador And Wife Arrive in U.S.A.

By Marie McNair

THE FAME of Mme. Erkin, wife of the new Turkish Ambassador, has preceded her to Washington. She's one of Turkey's most beautiful women; her clothes come from Paris, she's young and she's "tall and slim, just like all the American ladies," said a spokesman yesterday at the Turkish Embassy.

MRS. McNAIR

The Ambassador, Feridun Cemel Erkin, is young, too—just 45—but he's been in the diplomatic service of his country for already a score of years. The new envoy and his wife arrived in New York yesterday from Turkey, are stopping over for a brief stay and will be here either late today or tomorrow.

Feridun Erkin is a graduate of the Galata-Saray Lyceum in Istanbul, and went on to Paris to study law. His first government job was as secretary-general to the Exchange Commission in 1925.

From his appointment as chief of the political section of the Turkish Foreign Office, where he served three years, young Erkin was promoted to the rank of counselor in 1932.

He was Charge d'Affaires in Berlin until 1935 when he was transferred to Beyruth as Turkish Consul General. Then—back at the Foreign Office in 1937 where his outstanding ability in arranging negotiations with neighboring countries when he was at Beyruth, was rewarded with the plum of Director General of the Commercial and Economic Section of the Ministry.

From then on he climbed the ladder from Director General of the Political Section of the Foreign Office to the rank of Minister; was assistant to the Secretary General of the Foreign Office in 1944, then Secretary General, which corresponds to our Assistant Secretary of State. After two years the Ambassador was named Chief of Mission to Rome.

NO SOONER had Lady Rama Rau, wife of the Indian Ambassador, set foot in Washington than she went down to a television station to tell her audience about herself and India on a program arranged some weeks before her arrival.

Lady Rama Rau has a serene, noble, dispassionate appearance that is typical of most of her compatriots. Her hair, worn simply and drawn back from her face, is almost completely gray.

On board the Mauretania, which brought the Ambassador's wife from England her entourage was enlivened by her two small granddaughters, Asha Wagle, who is 4, and Nikhil Wagle, 18 months. An English governess had them in tow and two native Indian servants were on call at all hours. The children's parents were left behind in England but it's quite possible they'll come to America in the early fall when Asha's and Nikhil's visit comes to an end.

Capitalites Away on Holiday Trips

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Dominick who have been spending several weeks in Castile, Me., are expected back in town on Saturday.

Dr. and Mrs. Aubrey Fischer are vacationing in Ventnor, N. J., where they have taken a cottage. They have with them their daughter, Mrs. Joseph DeYoung, jr., and her young twin daughters and Mrs. Fischer's mother, Mrs. Charles Picard.

Miss Nancy Horton, daughter of Mrs. George Norton, and the late George Horton, author and diplomat, has sailed for a visit to Europe. She will return in October aboard the Saturnia.

Mrs. Philip Owen has returned to Washington after spending a month in Chicago.

Miss Jean Kaufmann is spending some time in Swampscott, Mass., visiting friends.

Entry Hall Gives First Impression of Home

When you are decorating your home begin by giving your entrance hall critical analysis. This hall gives your visitors their first impression of your home. So make it a good one. It may be the only glimpse some visitors will ever see of your home. Make it express your taste and your way of life, says Christine Holbrook, home furnishings editor of Better Homes and Gardens.

The entrance hall must be planned for utility as well as beauty. Your hall protects your living areas from bad weather, so its floors must take a lot of pounding. You'll find linoleum, rubber tile, or composition flooring is easiest to keep spick and span. If you want carpeting, throw an extra piece in front of the door to catch the first dirt.

Whether you carpet your hall floor or not, do carpet noisy stairs. Light carpet shades show less wear, lint, and dust than darker colors. Be sure stair carpeting is laid with extra turn-under top and bottom so you can shift it a few inches each year to equalize wear.

Let yourself go with a lively design in wallpaper or canvas for the hall. Wallpaper furnishes without furniture. An allover pattern will camouflage fingerprints and scars. In any case, hall paper should fit the color scheme of the rest of the house.

You won't have room for much furniture in your entrance hall but the furniture you do use should provide a place for mail, gloves, umbrellas—a mirror for last minute primping and perhaps a telephone table and chair. Use the very nicest pieces of furniture you own in your entry hall. In an upstairs hall take advantage of waste space for built-in bookshelves, a linen chest, or a nook for mending.

Don't Overload Circuits

Plugging too many electric appliances into one outlet not only cuts the current and means less power and dimmer lights; it also may overload the circuit and blow a fuse, rural electrification adviser of the United States Department of Agriculture say. It pays to have enough outlets and to have them conveniently placed. The time to install them most economically is when the house is wired.

Girls' Nation Hears Gen. Bradley

No Draft for Women Anticipated

By Genevieve Reynolds d

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chief of staff, United States Army, yesterday expressed a belief that American women will not be drafted into the armed services.

The subject arose when Nancy Dean of Gloucester, Mass., one of the 94 delegates to Girls' Nation, put the poser to the Chief of Staff. General Bradley received the group of teen-agers of Girls' Nation, sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary, at his office in the Pentagon.

To the query he replied, "I doubt very much if women will be drafted into the services. I hope that we can keep the women's part on a volunteer basis as in World War II."

After congratulating the high school seniors who came to Washington to "study government," General Bradley challenged them with "prove your leadership in years to come. Take an active interest in government. It's your government.

"Citizens of this country have more privileges than any one else in the world," he continued. "You keep it this way."

Wac Director Presented

General Bradley introduced Col. Mary A. Hallaren, director, Women's Army Corps, and commented, "all the senior officers in the Army are not men."

Following the informal reception with the Chief of Staff, the youthful leaders from 47 States toured the Pentagon. Prior to their visit to national defense headquarters, they visited the Supreme Court where they held a simulated session, patterned after the high tribunal, and heard Representative Georgia L. Lusk of New Mexico warn against the dangers of communism.

"Communism no longer is a laughing matter," cautioned Mrs. Lusk. "Imagine for a moment a police force larger than any peace time army we have ever had, with the power to arrest with or without cause. Imagine your daily lives being under the constant scrutiny of the police force, the terror of a knock at the door in the middle of the night. This is a small picture of what life behind the iron curtain is really like. Strangely, there are those in the United States who find such a way of life attractive and preferable to our own."

The Congresswoman advised the girls to ovecome the Communists' threat by recognizing its aim, methods, actual operations, and exposing the fake doctrine.

"We must keep ourselves strong in every way," she emphasized, "and continue our efforts to build a lasting peace. To meet this challenge will test the fiber of this Nation, but we shall, without doubt, be prepared and able to meet and overcome this obstacle to lasting peace."

Calling upon the delegates to participate in Government, Mrs. Lusk declared, "A democracy cannot live if it is forgotten. It must be cared for, fed, and strengthened by your everyday interest and participation in all its activities."

Predict Woman President

Delegates voted that a woman will be President of the United States following a lively debate on the subject, which lasted until around midnight. Joyce Johnson of Colorado Springs gave the history of the entire feminist movement since the Seneca Falls convention of 1848 in four minutes and called the roll of great women in history to prove that women now are ready to be the Chief Executive.

Sylvia Bacon of Watertown, S. Dak., argued that "women have evolved slowly and surely in national affairs," then predicted that a woman would be President of the United States in the lifetime of the Girls' Nation delegates.

"Women need a two-pronged security—home and politics," declared Miss Bacon.

Jo Hamilton of Virginia maintained that women's place is in the home, not in politics. She said she doubted that women are physically or emotionally strong enough to be President of the United States.

Alice Jean Wright of Missouri, vice president of the second Girls' Nation, presided over the forum, "Will There Be a Woman President of the United States?"

Lillian Gong of Miami, Fla., who was defeated by a close margin in the race for the presidency of Girls' Nation Monday night, was named chief justice of the supreme court which organized for a simulated session of the United States Supreme Court.

Associate justices named to the bench were Louisa Buono of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Kay Conrad of Hiawatha, Kans.; Margaret Louise Moll of Louisville, Ky.; Ann Strickland, La Grange, Ga.; Claudia Boss, Winslow, Ariz.; Anita Diamond of Southgate, Calif.; Dorothy Alexander of Houston, Texas, and Jane Rendelman of Anna, Ill.

Debate Is Held

Immediately upon organizing the court and naming of justices, the girls held a lengthy debate on a mythical case pertaining to national elections. The case, Dewman versus Thurman, revolved around the constitutionality of electors switching votes to the opposite party. One leading debater putting up an impassioned argument was "Justice" Adelaide Sylvia Bacon of Watertown, S. Dak.

Mrs. Robert Macauley, assistant director, Women's Division of the Republican National Committee, last night advised the Girls' Nation delegates to enter politics early and to join and be active in the party of their choice.

The same admonition was reiterated by Mrs. India Edwards, director, Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee. Both addressed the group at a dinner meeting held in American University.

Mrs. Macauley praised Girls' Nation, declaring that "it is the answer to subversive influence in this country." "It shows a positive Americanism," she said.

"The right to criticize is a cherished right," she continued. "But unless we join a political party we can't be effective in improving it. We can talk and vote, but we can't expect the party to pay much attention unless we are members."

Following the talks the delegates wanted to know the answers to these puzzlers: (1) How can youth be active in politics before voting age. (2) Will the appearance of Wallace's Third Party and the advent of J. Strum Thurmond's Dixiecratic party set a trend for a multiple party system, (3) How can opportunists be kept out of politics? (4) To what extent should politics be discussed in textbooks and the class room?

Mrs. Macauley predicted that the "Third Party soon will disappear and the two-party political system would prevail in this country. She said that she didn't know anyway to keep opportunists out of politics but that nonopportunists should get in and work to counteract their influence.

Mrs. Edwards suggested that young girls join the youth movements of the political parties in their own home States so that they could be active prior to the voting age.

Highlights of today's session will be an address by the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Mark Andrews, to the Girls' Nation delegates, 9 a. m. in the Old House Building. Another featured event this morning will be a simulated Senate session. During the afternoon the group will tour the FBI and return to their headquarters at American University for a dinner and inaugural ball.

GENERAL OMAR N. BRADLEY, Chief of Staff, U. S. Army, signs his autograph for Miss Lois G. Kappenhorn of Battle Mountain, Neveda, delegate to the Girls' Nation. The group, organized and sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary, visited the Chief of Staff yesterday at his headquarters in the Pentagon Building. Purpose of the Girls' Nation is to give the alert teen-agers a better understand of our national government and their responsibilities as citizens

'Women's Day' To Be Observed By Democrats

Washington, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—The Democratic National Committee today announced plans for a fund-raising campaign on September 27 in observance of Democratic Women's Day.

The Democratic Digest, published by the committee and edited by its Women's Division, said the funds will be used for educational programs for women members of the party.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the late President, and Mrs. India Edwards, executive director of the Women's Division, urged support of the drive in statements published by the Digest. Digest.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who first suggested the annual observance to commemorate the first service by women on the national committee, said:

"I think it is important that the women of our party should know the basic principles of democracy, and recognize the responsibilities that we, as members of our communities, now have because our Nation has become the leading democracy of the world."

Mrs. Edwards said that all expenses for radio recordings, transportation, handbills and other incidentals "are in the column of rising prices—due to the Republican-controlled Congress—just as bread and butter and shoes and rents . . ."

Chef of the Air Gives Some Rules For Good Cooks

Associated Press Newsfeatures

New York—No lady would serve a sandwich with its crust on, says Maurice La Barre, chef of the Pan American flight kitchen at LaGuardia field. While training stewardesses to make sandwiches 20,000 feet above the ground, Chef La Barre has worked out a list of cooking hints helpful even to landlubbers:

1. Always keep knives sharp.
2. To keep celery ends white, dip them in water mixed with lemon juice.
3. Keep salad green fresh by wrapping in dampened cheesecloth and storing in refrigerator.
4. Romaine stands hot weather better than Boston or Iceberg lettuce.
5. Always serve a slice of lemon with tomato juice or melon.
6. With hearts of lettuce, serve Russian dressing; with asparagus or heart of artichoke salad, serve French or vinegrette dressing.
7. Use a little wine in the cooking of pot roasts or meat casseroles—red wine with beef, sherry or white wine with chicken or veal.
8. Never salt roast beef or steak until cooking is completed. The seasoning will not penetrate the meat while it is still cooking, and it draws the blood out, causing the meat to lose color and flavor.

Delicious—and Easy on the Budget

THERE'S nothing better than a piece of good, stuffed meat—especially when it's a veal breast with a celery stuffing, topped with strips of smoky bacon. Such a dish provides variety on your menus and it's easy on the budget, too. Directions for preparing the veal and making the stuffing follow:

3 to 5-pound veal breast salt
pepper
4 slices of bacon, if desired
Celery stuffing

Have a pocket cut from the end of a veal breast. Fill pocket with celery stuffing and sew or skewer edges together. Place on rack in open roasting pan. Season. Place bacon slices over meat. Roast in a slow oven (300 degrees Fahrenheit) until done, allowing 2 to 2½ hours.

CELERY STUFFING

1 cup finely chopped celery
2 tablespoons chopped onion
2 to 3 tablespoons drippings
2 to 3 cups soft bread crumbs
1½ teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon poultry seasoning
Water or soup stock to moisten slightly

Cook celery and onion in the drippings until tender. Combine cooked celery and onions, bread crumbs and seasonings. Add water or soup stock. Mix lightly.

About Removing Red Stain

The dye of my red leather purse rubbed off onto my white cotton blouse. It is a fine, expensive cotton. What will remove the red marks? B. K.

Bleaching is the best way to remove this dye from the blouse. Use bottled chlorine bleach. If the stains are not very dark, use of the bleach in the usual way recommended on the bottle for laundering purposes may be sufficient. If not, a stronger solution of the bleach can be applied to the spot left a few seconds, then rinsed out. Be sure to rinse thoroughly in two waters; if any bleach is left in the cloth it may weaken the fibers seriously. Sunshine is a natural bleach and will also help in getting rid of traces of the dye. Extra moisture left in the clothes after the final rinsing increases the bleaching action of the sunshine.

Can anything be done to remove grease spots from a rayon bed jacket which already has been washed and ironed? This is a borrowed bed jacket which I must soon return to its owner. B. R.

Dry cleaning fluid should remove the grease spots, although it may leave rings and necessitate another laundering of the bed jacket. Another idea would be to put the spots between two clean blotters or two pieces of cleansing tissue and press over them with a warm iron. If the blotters take up grease, shift to a fresh place and press again.

Will you tell me how to treat desk and bureau drawers so they will not stick during the humid months? J. P. L.

Sides and bottoms of drawers are often made of soft wood with little or no finish, and absorb moisture in humid weather. This makes the wood swell and drawers stick. Putting a lighted electric bulb on an extension cord into the drawer will help to dry it out some. The edges that cause the sticking can then be shaved down with a plane, coarse file, or sandpaper. You can tell where the sticking is because the wood is usually more shiny in that spot. Remove only enough to allow free movement, then rub paraffin on all parts that slide.

In the fall when the heat is turned on, the wood will dry out thoroughly. When it's good and dry, you can apply a finish of varnish to the wood which will help prevent its absorbing moisture and swelling next summer.

To E. A. D.: Here is an amendment to our reply to your recent questions about mending plastic doll furniture. Ethelene dichloride is a solvent for two kinds of plastic—lucite and plexiglass. It has no effect on other types which can, however, be mended with plastic cement. Many of the household cements can be used for this purpose. Check instructions on outside of the package to be sure the cement you buy is recommended for use on plastics. If the clerk did not tell you the type of plastic you were buying at the time of purchase, perhaps there is some marking on the furniture to give you a clue about it.

I'm leaving to take a job in Europe Sunday and have a leather shoulder bag I'd like some advice about before going. It is made of good black calf. One day, I was caught in the rain and the dye came off the bag where it got wet. Is there any way the bag can be treated to prevent this? R. J. K.

A wax treatment is ideal for colored bags that tend to rub off on clothing. Besides keeping the color from coming off, the wax makes them shed water when it rains. Apply liquid wax sparingly (the same type you use on furniture). Then polish well.

Ways With Sauces, Leftovers

To make a shrimp sauce to serve over boiled or broiled fish add ½ cup finely chopped shrimp to a cup of white sauce and season with salt, pepper, finely chopped parsley, finely grated onion and lemon juice.

For a delicious sauce for fish add one-third cup of capers to a cup of rich, well-seasoned cream sauce.

A sour cream dressing for shredded cabbage can be quickly concocted by adding sugar, salt, pepper and pimento to the sour cream.

Grind leftover cooked meat and combine with mashed potatoes and seasonings; shape into patties and fry lightly. Be sure to use finely grated onion or onion powder as part of the seasoning.

On the Town

PICTURE yourself in the back room of almost any night club. You're listening in on a conversation between the owner and a talent agent unfortunate enough to drop in to see one of his acts when the act isn't doing well in the crowd's opinion . . . "Will you get that schmoe out of here before he ruins what little business I do have and forces me into bankruptcy?"

Tommy Dorsey

"Look, you signed a two-week contract at a $125 per and you've got to live up to it, a bargain's a bargain, an' if ya want any more of our talent ya gotta keep him." We'd love to let you listen a little longer but the air gets a little bluish from here in. At any rate, the agent, a fast talker, talks the owner into giving the comic another listen during the next show to watch a new audience's reaction. During the next show the audience decides that he's so corny that he's funny and gives him a medium sized hand for effort, which is probably more than he deserves. An act can be pretty corny and still draw the crowd in. It's the same curiosity that draws people into a freak show at the circus.

THE Casino Royal pops into the second week of the current show with Paul Brilliant doing the emceeing and gag routine. He's billed as "The Late Star of Nothing" which shows that advertising can be truthful on occasion. Paul has a flavor that could be picked up in only one of two places. The circus as a barker, or a burlesque house as a comic. It's a soup to nuts deal with a John Philip Sousa march served as an entree.

It took us a few minutes to figure out that we'd seen the Hovings in another nitery in town not too long ago. They appeared at the club Cairo shortly before a combination of rain and ruin closed the doors. They do a rather sophisticated dance act that smacks of musical comedy, which is what they want it to smack of. Their interpretive numbers are quite good. June Walker, a cute little thing, takes care of the tap dancing end of the show.

Friday is the thirteenth. That's the signal for rabbit's feet, clover leaves and various other impedimenta. There's one wearer of the green in town who thinks it's all a lot of hooey, and to prove it she's taking one of the most expensive gambles of the season by booking Tommy Dorsey (a several thousand dollar attraction these days) into Chesapeake Beach Park for that very night. Just to carry this thing out a little, let's say Kay's name is Catherine O'Gorman Ford. Knock out the O'Gorman and what do you have but 13 letters.

Freddy Donovan (there's that 13 again), who manages the park, is very much in sympathy with the whole thing. The other Irishman in the deal, Tommy McDorsey, hain't a bit afraid of the superstition.

To prove that people can be lucky on that day they're holding the finals in the Miss Nation's Capital beauty contest. The winner is going to be lucky enough to win a free weekend trip to Atlantic City. It's expected, but not promised, because we've learned better in such matters, that Governor Lane will be there to crown the queen. We're lucky (13 doesn't bother us either) enough to be a judge during this panorama of pulchritude. We'll swap spots for 13 four leaf clovers though.

Life's little embarrassing moments. The other night Paul Kain at the Glen Echo ballroom got a request for "Deep Purple." Vocalist Jimmy Nichols got up to sing it with all the confidence in the world. Half way through it he realized that he had forgotten the lyrics. What to do? Simple. The boy made like Crosby with many baa baa boos through the rest of the song, then took an oath not to try the stunt again unless he was positive of the lyrics.

Young Child's Eyes and Ears Should Get Pre-School Test

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Two of the most important physical tools for doing school work successfully are the child's eyes and ears. No one can tell by looking into eyes, whether they are capable of doing the work expected of them. No one can tell, just because a child answers when spoken to, that he will be able to hear all of the explanations and instructions given to him by the teacher.

Along with the physical examination, to determine whether the child has had all the immunizing "shots" and the booster shots to increase the efficiency of those given in infancy, the child is entitled to an examination of the eyes and ears.

Too many children have been shamed, or punished for inattention, or failure to concentrate, when the eyes were to be blamed for inability to do the work demanded of them.

This deficiency in sight may not show up until the child is trying to learn to read. Then he cannot, though he would, recognize those symbols which are thrust in front of him. Any child who is failing in reading deserves, first of all, an examination of the eyes. If these are giving him good service then the cause of his reading failure can be sought elsewhere.

Ears may be dulled, without leading the mother to suspect their inefficiency. So many of the instructions in first grades must, of necessity, be given verbally, that a hearing deficiency is a tremendous handicap to the small pupil.

The playful, inattentive pupil, forever getting into mischief and acting the clown to attract the attention of others, may be the handicapped child who thus compensates for his scholastic failures. Unaware as he is of the cause of his slow progress, he prefers to be called "funny" rather than stupid.

School is difficult enough, at best, without loading the child with burdens of ill health, or physical deficiencies which are capable of correction.

Those Ugly Spots

Should you spill some drops of water on your hardwood floors while watering the plants, rub them with a cloth dipped in turpentine, using a circular motion when rubbing. Dry with a piece of clean flannel and your floor will be restored.

New Knife Handles

Knife handles today are commonly made of walnut, rosewood, black hard rubber, plastic, aluminum and a new plastic called pakkawood ad cocobolo.

Piano Placement

Place the piano a few inches away from the wall of the room, especially if it is against an outside wall. The dampness coming through the wall will ruin the tone of the instrument and cause it to be out of tune very quickly.

'Schoolmarm' Comes Into Own In Germany

By Richard Kasischke
From Associated Press Newsfeatures

Berlin.—The "school-marm" has come into her own in postwar Germany.

In a country where once women teachers were relatively rare they are now in the majority. This is the result of shortages of men, due to war losses, and the policy of the occupying powers to bring women out of the kitchen into public service and public affairs.

The Nazis had to call women into teaching as well as industrial jobs when manpower became scarce during the war. Nevertheless, the over-all increase in women teachers in the American occupation zone has increased from 27.3 per cent in 1938 (the year before the outbreak of war) to 51.6 per cent at the end of 1947.

Women Teachers Win

The increase in the British zone is comparable and in the Russian zone it is even greater, because the Russians have been especially promoting the participation of women in civil service jobs and public life. Only the French have been relatively laggard in this, according to American officials, and that is due to French traditions of preference to male teachers.

In the American zone, according to recently disclosed statistics, the increase in women teachers is most predominant in elementary schools. There they increased from 26.9 per cent in 1938 to 55.1 per cent in 1947. In intermediate schools the gain was from 42.4 per cent to 69.2; in secondary schools from 22.8 to 37.1; in full-time vocational schools from 39.1 to 49.1 and in agricultural schools from 34.9 per cent to 40.8.

Many Schools Undamaged

The physical plant of German education came through the war in good shape—at least in the American occupation zone in western Germany, which includes such major cities as Nuernberg, Munich and Frankfurt. There, according to an official survey, only three per cent of the zone's school buildings below the university level were heavily damaged while 85.2 per cent were undamaged.

This was not, however, true in Berlin. In the U. S. sector of this city only 15.2 per cent of school buildings remained undamaged, 54.8 were rated slightly damaged, 21.3 heavily damaged, and 8.7 per cent totally destroyed.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Philatelists Want Your Canceled Stamps

One of our last prevacation columns included a suggestion from Al Small of 4109 Russell ave., Mount Rainier, Md.

Al pointed out that many Government and private offices here receive large amounts of mail each day, and mail carries postage stamps which are of interest to collectors.

The suggestion was that we organize such collections for the benefit of worth-while organizations which might be interested.

Three District Liners have responded, and have requested that stamps be saved for their groups.

M. Elsdon suggests that they be sent to the Girls Friendly Society, care of Katharine Moncure, Church of Epiphany, 1317 G st. nw.

Mrs. Sol Schenker of 3315 16th st. nw. puts in a bid for Wilner Auxiliary 381 of the Jewish War Veterans. This group has been saving stamps for the Sons and Daughters of Norway, which sells the stamps in Norway and thereby raises funds for the maintenance of a tuberculosis sanatorium there. Stamps for this purpose may be sent to the auxiliary's president, Mrs. Justine Gubin, at 3147 16th st. nw.

George A. Atkins of Box 62, Centreville, Md., has two excellent alternatives to suggest. First, he sponsors a stamp club for the boys at a Centreville high school. And, second, he'd like to send more stamps to "Stamps for the Wounded," which turns them over to hospitalized veterans—many of whom are philatelists.

If some District Liner in each office will organize the folks who handle the mail and then send the stamps off to any of these worth-while groups we can turn waste material into a valuable asset.

LIFE-IS-LIKE-THAT DEPT.

The other day I ran into the Burns Twins, who are doing a dance routine at the Capitol Theater.

"How's the picture at the Capitol this week?" I asked.

"We haven't seen it yet," the twins replied in unison.

"How come?" I asked.

"It's one of those things," they shrugged. "We keep telling ourselves that we'll see the picture tomorrow night, when we're not so tired, and then first thing you know we close the date without seeing the picture.

"A couple of weeks later we pay to see it in another city. It always seems to work out like that."

Harold Hughes of 1324 Fort Stevens dr. nw. greets my return from vacation with a cartoon:

"WHO SAID THE CIRCULATION WENT UP WHILE I WAS GONE? C'MON, NOW, OPEN THE DOOR—SOMEBODY MUSTA MISSED ME!"

I asked Cartoonist Irwin for advice about the drawing. "That potbellied prow isn't very flattering," I mused. "I wonder if I ought to use it? What do you think of the cartoon?"

"Excellent," replied Irwin with genuine enthusiasm. "Use it, and then I can take a vacation for one day myself."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

The enclosed photo is me.

On the Fourth of July some very humorous character tied a big firecracker to my leg. When it exploded, it tore my hind leg open. Very funny.

Some people took me in and treated the cut, and my leg is now healed again and I'm feeling very chipper. I like these folks and they like me, but (confidentially, Bill) it's a bit crowded here.

There were three pooches here ahead of me, and they think they have a priority or something.

Do you suppose you could find me a new home? I'm brown and white, about 18 months old, and weigh around 40 pounds. The people I'm boarding with (Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Sommer of 630 Chestnut ave., Falls Church, Va.) will take messages for me at Falls Church 3865. Thanks.

Boy.

Dear Boy:

I'm sure you'll find a nice place to live. And if you ever happen to run into the humorist who tied that firecracker to your leg, I hope you take a chunk out of the seat of his pants. Bill.

NEW YORK.—King Frederick of Denmark came to Stockholm recently to celebrate the ninetieth birthday of King Gustav of Sweden. He came on the royal yacht, which docked in front of the palace. King Gustav was at the dock to greet him, and to present a gift to the visiting monarch. . . . The Swedish King wanted this gift to be a personal one—something which Frederick, who has jewels, wealth and power, already didn't possess, and which would indicate clearly that Gustav had obtained it by his personal attention. The 90-year-old King therefore went fishing on the lake behind his castle at Drottingholm, caught 22 sunfish, had them iced in a basket, and carried it across the quay to present to the King of Denmark.

Former Gov. Charles Poletti of New York is moving his family to Geneva to be nearby while he works in Europe. His children will study at the International School set up by the League of Nations.

Ambassador James Dunn was taken to Munich last week for a minor operation.

Pierre Monteux, the conductor, and his wife arrived in Boston a few days ago, en route to their summer home in Hancock, Me. They couldn't get any railroad reservations, and Monteux sighed: "Oh, what wouldn't I give to be in my own bed tonight. I'd give anything." Mrs. Monteux repeated, "Anything? Okay," and she took him into a taxi, told the driver, "Hancock, Maine, please," and arrived in Hancock at 4 a. m. The fare was $135; tip $15.

The true actress lives only for the theater, and all her thoughts and preoccupations are concerned only with the stage. Katharine Cornell gave an example of this during a dinner session with her husband, Guthrie McClintic, and their guests, Garson Kanin, the playwright, and his wife, Ruth Gordon, the playwright-actress . . . Miss Cornell admired the wedding rings worn by Kanin and Miss Gordon. "Don't you ever wear a wedding ring?" asked Miss Gordon . . . Miss Cornell replied: "Only in 'Candida.'"

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Real Estate Lobby Work Told

By Drew Pearson

The real estate lobby worked backstage with its pet Congressional friends almost every minute of the special session. The lobby even engaged in writing free speeches for Senators in order to kill the public housing bill.

Pearson

Two crack writers for the real estate lobby even worked one night until 4 a. m. writing a speech for Senate Majority Leader Kenneth Wherry. It was quite a forensic masterpiece.

What happened was that the Republican National Committee had already sent Wherry a speech supposed to be the Republican answer to inflation. Among other things it described free enterprise as a system that provided little girls with plenty of bubble gum. And it compared the difference between the Democratic and Republican viewpoints to the number of bananas a peddler had for sale. The Democrats stood for one banana and considered two bananas a monopoly, while the Republicans stood for 1000 bananas. So said the GOP ghost-writer.

Wherry read the script over once, tossed it into the wastebasket.

"It couldn't have been worse if the Democratic National Committee had written it for me," he snorted.

Then he phoned real estate lobbyist Cal Snyder for a new speech, asked for rush service to meet a radio deadline. Snyder assigned two of his men to stay up all night to write it.

Note—The real estate lobby's most regular customer for speeches and research is Senator Harry Cain, Washington Republican.

At the GOP closed-door Senate caucus last week, Senator Charles Tobey, the New Hampshire firecracker, urged giving President Truman all the controls he wanted. Tobey recalled a dinner-table statement, may by Indiana's Bill Jenner last year, that the best way to kill off Truman was to give him the controls he asked.

"If so many people want price control," snapped Tobey, "why not give it to them?"

A group of veterans got such prompt action from President Truman the other day that they didn't have time to finish asking him for what they wanted.

The veterans called at the White House to urge Truman to use his influence on House Minority Leader Sam Rayburn. They wanted Sam to quit stalling and sign the discharge petition to force a vote on the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill.

As spokesman Jack Carter, representing the Veterans of Foreign Wars, began to explain their mission, the President interrupted.

"Sam has already signed," he explained.

President Truman informed his callers that he had just finished holding a press conference at which he had given Congress "the devil."

Amvet representative Bob McLaughlin commented that his organization had been studying juvenile delinquecy, had found that most cases could be traced back to slum conditions which the public housing bill would correct.

That, said Truman, was one of the reasons he favored the public housing bill.

Note: Thanks to the real estate lobby and Senator Taft's change of mind about his own housing bill, slum clearance and public housing was vetoed at the recent special session.

Harassed Democratic Chairman Senator Howard McGrath tried to coax Southern Senators back on speaking terms—socially, if not politically—by inviting the entire Democratic flock to a "harmony party."

The idea was to wash out the Mason-Dixon Line with free drinks and the promise to keep politics off the program. Despite this, a large Southern bloc, led by South Carolina's obstinate Senator Olin Johnston, sulked at home.

All of them were set to attend when McGrath suddenly announced that segregation would be abolished at Democratic national headquarters. Unhappily the timing was the same day as the McGrath party.

However, several less sensitive Southerners, such as Florida's Spessard Holland and Alabama's John Sparkman, showed up anyway, and led the Democrats in singing "Dixie."

Florida's senior Senator, Claude Pepper, who opposed President Truman at the Democratic National Convention, got the gathering off to a good start by proposing a toast to Truman. All the southerners rose except Mississippi's stubborn Jim Eastland. Finally, when other senators ribbed him, Eastland rose and joined in the Truman toast.

Senator Jim Murray of Montana followed up with a toast to McGrath. Vice-Presidential Candidate Alben Barkley was next toasted, after which McGrath announced that the only speeches tolerated would be stories.

Note—The party wound up by serenading McGrath with "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," singing "My Old Kentucky Home" for Barkley and "Deep in the Heart of Texas" for Senator Tom Connally.

He Found the Way

I saw him when he stopped his work . . . To smoke a cigaret . . . And there was something that it seemed . . . He wanted to forget . . . I followed him across the room . . . And down the dusty stairs . . . And his delightful smile appeared . . . To put away his cares . . . Along the street he said hello . . . To everyone he knew . . . And when he spoke his tone of voice . . . Was friendly, warm and true . . . And so in all respects it seemed . . . Quite obvious to me . . . That he had found the way to live . . . In peace and harmony . . . That he had overcome his cares . . . By lifting up his eyes . . . To see the golden sunshine and . . . The beauty of the skies.
